IMPORTANT DECISIONS OF THE MEXICAN CLAIMS COMMISSION.

Resignation of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

[Special Telegraphic Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

THE PREMATURE PUBLICATION OF THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON IN THE COURTS.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, has remained here since the adjournment of Congress, for the purpose of prosecuting the indictment against the newspaper correspondents and telegraph operators who refused to testify before the Senate committee last spring in relation to the stolen treaty. His arduous labors have resulted in the indictment of Messrs. Ramsdell and White, of the Tribune, and Messrs. Tinker and Kirby, of the Western Union Telegraph; but now that the indictment has been found, the question arises, what shall be done with the accused? The Supreme Court of the District doubts its jurisdiction, and the grand jury cannot make a presentment to the Police Court, so that the whole indictment will probably fall a dead letter. It is only a continuation of the farce that was commenced in the Senate chamber a few weeks ago.

THE INDIAN BUREAU SQUABBLE ENDED.

The warfare between the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Board of Indian Commissioners has resulted, as was predicted it would, in the resignation of Gen. Parker, to take effect on the 1st of August. The President's letter accepting the resignation is dated at Long Branch, July 13.

THE MOBILE DEFALCATION.

Collector Robb, of Savannah, is now attempting to shove the responsibility of the late defalcation in his custom-house from his own shoulder to those of an ex-collector, one Jas. Johnson. Robb informs the Treasury Department that the loss occurred then, and intimates that it was so well covered up that its discovery was made impossible until now. The Treasury officials think this a very strange story.

TERRIBLE STATE OF AFFAIRS SOUTH.

Beside the real testimony given before the Kuklux Committee, there is a good deal of documentary ex parte evidence in the shape of letters that have come up from the South addressed to different members, showing the terrible condition in which the States have been plundered by the rule of Radicals, carpet-baggers and scalawags. The information from Mississippi, especially, presents an appalling picture of oppressive taxation, and no prospect of relief except by remedial legislation. Thousands of the best citizens of the State are doomed to witness the sacrifice of what little property they have saved since the war, all because the last Legislature did not represent the bona-fide tax-payers of the State but was controlled by a ring of corruptionists and extortioners. This is perhaps not exactly the sort of testimony the majority of the Kuklux Committee want, but it has its effect in showing the actual condition of portions of the South, and how the people are governed down there. The only wonder seems to be that they forbear so well.

THE SAMANA BAY INIQUITY—THE SAN DOMINGO SCHEME.

The President has continued the lease of Samana Bay for one year longer. In doing so, he has given his enemies weapons which they will use with good effect next winter. Prominent Republican Senators, who are here, denounce this as a gross act of usurpation, and as an offense impeachable in its nature. The convention for the lease of Samana bay expired on the 29th of March, 1870. It was never ratified by the Senate, and yet the President has been so determined to obtain possession that he has exceeded all bounds, and set the law of Congress and the will of the people at defiance. The American flag still flies over it, and American naval vessels are used to keep the flag floating and protect Baez. Mr. Fabiens, who has acted as agent of both Grant and Baez, was recently seeking to raise money in Boston and New York, in order to pay the so-called second year's lease, and thus commit the Government to another outlay, by which the President's scheme might be promoted. As that proceeding could have no value without some official indorsement, the aid of the President was invoked, and he addressed a note to Mr. Burt, postmaster of Boston, intended to aid Fabiens' negotiation and to accomplish other objects in connection with San Domingo. That letter was exhibited for this purpose, and still he was unsuccessful in Boston, but he obtained the money in New York, and he was thus enabled to keep Baez afloat, and, at the same time, he keeps a fleet there at vast expense solely by an act of usurpation. It is known here that our fleet there is virtually under the control of Baez and subject to his order, for, the last mail that went to San Domingo took out the following instructions from the Navy Department, with the approval of the President:

"While your force is temporarily reduced you will be especially vigilant in protecting the present Domminican administration against all assailants, whether foreign or domestic, and disposing your forces to conform as far as practicable to the wishes of President Baez."

More than that, the Navy Department is advised that only recently the whole armed force of the frigate Congress, under command of Lieut. Commander Stephen A. McCarty, was landed at Manzanillo bay to aid the troops of Baez in case of an anticipated attack by Luperon, and since then the boats of the Yantic were lowered for a similar purpose at Mete Cristo. In carrying out his scheme, too, the President is rewarding the son of Fabiens, who has just been appointed United States Commercial Agent at Santa Barbara, an office for which there is no need, as there is really no commerce there. Within three months Baez has had preparations made to take refuge on board an American man-of-war, and the United States steamer Swatara has been ordered to remain at San Domingo City to take him aboard and protect him at any time that he may be obliged to flee his capital. It is a knowledge of these facts coming to the ears of Republican Senators through official channels that compels them to take notice of the Executive's usurpations, in his efforts to get San Domingo in defiance of the will of the people.

A GERMAN APPOINTMENT.

Much indignation is expressed among the Germans of this city in regard to the recent appointment of Fred. Meyers, a clerk of the Treasury Department, as special agent of the Government, who started for Germany to confer with the proper authorities there about matters connected with immigration. It is generally conceded that he is unable to speak correctly his mother tongue—the German language. As editor of a defunct civil-service journal, Meyers criticized severely Senator Schurz's course on St. Domingo, and prior to his departure, turned the German weekly of this city, the Columbia, from a Democratic into a so-called central Radical organ, the last number of which holds the German Senator to account for his reformatory anti-Grant tendency. The President expects to use Meyers for the coming report for his next annual message to Congress, undoubtedly with a view to gain the much-needed good-will of the German-Americans hereafter.

[To the Associated Press.]

ADJOURNMENT OF THE KUKLUX COMMITTEE.

The Kuklux Investigating Committee will probably adjourn this week.

THE CAPITAL REMOVED TO LONG BRANCH.

All business which comes to the Executive mansion requiring the President's personal attention is promptly sent to him at Long Branch.

DECISIONS OF THE MEXICAN CLAIMS COMMISSION.

The umpire in the Mexican Claims Commission has decided that the Mexican Government is responsible for the property of American citizens destroyed during the French invasion. He also decides that Americans doing business in Mexico are entitled to indemnity, not being Mexican citizens.

The commissioners have also decided that the Miramon and Zuloaga Governments in Mexico during 1858 and 1859 were not lawful Governments, and also that the American Government is not responsible for depredations committed by Confederate troops on Mexican citizens.

The Commission has allowed one important claim founded on a contract with the Mexican Republic, and it is supposed that they will allow all valid claims for military and other supplies furnished by our citizens to Mexico during the French invasion.

One of the great questions has yet to be disposed of, as to the jurisdiction of claims founded on bonds issued by Mexico and held by American citizens. This question has not been passed upon by the Commission or umpire.

AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS.

The July returns for the statistical division of the Department of Agriculture show a marked increase in the acreage of corn, amounting to fully 3,000,000, of which 2,000,000 are due to the determination of the cotton States to supply themselves. It is assumed that there are in corn equal to 42,000,000 acres, more than half the total acreage of all tilled crops. The only States failing to increase acreage in corn are New York, New England, and the Pacific States.

The condition of winter wheat on the 1st of July was somewhat above the average. The spring varieties presented a worse appearance than has been reported for several years. At the same time the ripening of winter wheat has been fully one week earlier than usual, and a large proportion had been cut at the date of the returns. Never was there better promise. The hay crop will be comparatively a small one.

Potatoes promise an average yield if they escape the drought and rot in future.

SUPERVISING STEAMBOAT INSPECTORS.

The Board of Steamboat Supervising Inspectors have approved and adopted the following patents: E. Clark, Louisville, Ky., steam register and life preserver; S. Boden, Louisville, Ky., water gauge; H. Coll, Pittsburg, Pa., syphon pump; G. Sawyer, Detroit, Michigan, detachable deck; J. W. Reynolds, Evansville, Indiana, boiler sediment agitator; E. Edson, New York, recording steam gauge.

Board adjourned sine die.

THE M'GARRAHAN CLAIM.

It is understood that certain questions in regard to the application of McGarrahan for the restoration of his record in the Interior Department will be referred to the Attorney General for decision.

NEW YORK CENTRAL TAX CASE.

The Secretary of the Treasury to-day returned to the Internal Revenue Office the case of the New York Central railroad, to be adjusted without taking into consideration the appeal now before the Department. Commissioner Pleasanton will delay for a reasonable time the collection of the tax, in order to investigate the books and other official statements, which the company offer in support of their claim against the full payment of the tax assessed against them.

AFTER AN UNEASY SEAT.

Col. Joseph Given, of Ohio, is prominently mentioned in connection with the Commissionership of Internal Revenue, in case of a vacancy in that office. Col. Given has been for a number of years a deputy commissioner in charge of the special division of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and is backed by strong influence.

APPOINTMENTS.

The President has appointed Moses Kelly, Wm. Gunton and W. S. Cox, of this district, visitors to the Government hospitals for the insane for a period of six years from the 1st inst.; John S. Armstrong, agent for the Indians of New Mexico, Albiquim agency; Henry A. Eastman, Register of the Land Office, Prescott, Arizona; H. Latham, of Arizona, Commissioner of Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia.

THE LATE FRENCH MINISTER.

M. Trielhard, late French Minister to Washington, is at present sojourning in Connecticut. He has entirely recovered his health, and leaves for France so soon as he shall learn that the Germans have evacuated that portion of the country which includes his estate.

INDICTMENT AGAINST THE OBSTINATE REPORTERS.

The Grand Jury have found an indictment against Herm J. Ramsdell and S. White, of the New York Tribune, and Chas. A. Tinker and Joseph A. Kirby, of the Western Union Telegraph office, charged with willfully and unlawfully refusing to testify on certain points before a special committee of the Senate of the United States concerning the premature publication of the Treaty of Washington. This refusal is declared to be against the form of the statute in such cases made and provided. The presentment in each case is found on the evidence of Senators Carpenter, Conkling, Sumner, Trumbull and Garrett Davis.

HOMEOPATHIC APPOINTMENT.

Dr. G. M. Perine, late examining surgeon of the Pension Bureau, who was removed by ex-Commissioner of Pensions Van Tierman because he was a homeopathist, has been appointed by the present Commissioner a member of the board of examining surgeons at Milwaukee.

DEATH OF COMMANDER MITCHELL.

Commander William Mitchell, who was placed on the retired list of the navy four years ago, died at his residence in this city yesterday.

RESIGNATION OF GEN. PARKER.

General Parker, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has resigned. The following is the correspondence on the subject:

WASHINGTON, June 29, 1871.

TO THE PRESIDENT: The effect of Congressional legislation, since I have had the honor to hold the position of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, is to almost wholly divert from the Indian bureau all of its original importance, duties and proper responsibilities. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the present arrangements, is merely a sinecure office of the government; his principal duties being simply those of clerk of the board of Indian Commissioners, and operating wholly outside of and almost independent of the Indian bureau. I would gladly and willingly do anything in my power to aid in forwarding and promoting to successful issue the President's wise and beneficent Indian policy, but I cannot, in justice to myself, longer continue to hold the ambiguous position of Commissioner of Indian Affairs. I most respectfully and firmly tender my resignation of said office, to take effect on the first day of August, 1871. Sincerely thanking you, Mr. President, for the kindness and consideration you have always shown me, I have the honor to be, and shall ever remain, your obedient servant.

[Signed] ELY S. PARKER.

THE RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 13.—SIR—Your letter of the 29th of June, tendering your resignation as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to take effect on the 1st of August, 1871, was duly received. Accepting it severs official relations which have existed between us for eight consecutive years without cause of complaint as to your entire fitness for either of the important places which you have had during that time. Your management of the Indian bureau has been in harmony with the policy which I hope will tend to the civilization of the Indian race. It has also been able and discreet. In leaving the publice service to pursue a more independent course of life, you take with you my sincere wishes for your prosperity and my hearty commendation to all with whom the accidents of life may bring you in business relations for integrity and ability.

Very truly yours,

[Signed] U. S. GRANT.

To Gen. E. S. Parker, Commissioner Indian Affairs.

CHICAGO.

The Texas Cattle Trade.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The Salina (Kansas) Advocate of the latest date says the entire country east, west and south of Salina is now filled with Texas cattle. The bottoms are overflowing with them. Not less than 200,000 head are now within the precincts of the State, and the arrivals daily are immense in numbers. Prices range as follows: From $6 to $8 for yearlings, $10 to $12 for two-year-olds, $16 to $18 for three-year-olds and cows, and $20 to $24 for beeves. These prices appear to be well maintained.

THE BURIAL OF "TAD" LINCOLN.

The remains of Thos. Lincoln, son of the late President, were taken from this city last evening to Springfield in a special car tendered for the purpose by the Chicago and St. Louis railroad, and interred at Oak Ridge, near that city, beside those of his father and brother Willie. This morning the funeral took place from the residence of Nirian W. Edwards, an uncle of the deceased, and was attended by an immense concourse of the citizens of Springfield and the State. Among the leading citizens present were Senator Trumbull, Judge David Davis, General Hardee, Colonel Sheridan, J. Young Scammond, William B. Ogden, J. N. Arnold, and Senator Harlan, of Iowa, etc.

THE STORM.

A Severe Storm in New York.

NEW YORK, July 16.—During the thunder-storm to-day, the Yorkville bell-tower, one hundred and thirty feet high, with a five thousand seven hundred pound bell, was blown down.

A carriage containing A. D. Storme and wife and daughter, was crushed in Fifth avenue by a falling tree. The family escaped with slight injuries.

A sloop yacht, name unknown, capsized and sunk in the bay. One man was drowned.

A brig was struck by lightning and set on fire. Damage unknown.

The streets were flooded and chimneys blown down. A sail-boat, with Dr. Ambrose and son, three years old, of Brooklyn, on board, capsized during the storm. The child was drowned.

CHURCH AND RAILROAD DEPOTS DESTROYED.

VINELAND, N. J. July 17.—A fearful tornado, accompanied by thunder, lightning and heavy rain, struck this town last evening. The loss of property of all kinds is very severe. Roofs of houses, trees and fences were destroyed. The most serious losses were the destruction of the Episcopal church, two railway depots and two dwelling-houses. The loss of the church is especially felt. In one house destroyed, six men were gathered when the roof was taken off and the walls fell in, wounding some, but none dangerously. No loss of life reported. The tornado seems to have been entirely local, the country within a quarter of a mile of town escaping.

DUST TO DUST.

The Funeral Ceremonies Over the Victims of Bloody Wednesday.

Spectators Stand Uncovered While the Procession Passes.

THE LAST SAD CHAPTER OF THE RIOT.

FUNERAL OF WYATT AND PAGE.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The funeral of Sergeant Wyatt and private Page, of the Ninth regiment, killed in the riot, took place to-day at Woodlawn Cemetery. Services were held over the bodies in Calvary Church, Chaplain Flagg, of the Ninth regiment, delivering the funeral sermon.

THE CROWDS IN ATTENDANCE.

The remains were followed to the grave by the Ninth, Twelfth, Seventy-first, and representatives from other regiments. Some eight thousand citizens stood in the streets, in a drenching rain storm, and witnessed the procession. No one was allowed in the church save the military, police, and relatives of the family. The scene was impressive.

OFFICERS ATTACKED ON THEIR RETURN.

No disturbance whatever occurred on the route of the procession, but Captain Swift and Lieutenant Cardoza, of the Seventy-first regiment, while returning from the funeral, in uniform, were attacked by a mob, who tried to stab them. Lieutenant Cardoza drew a revolver and protected his chief until they reached home. No one was injured. John Mahoney, the ringleader, was arrested.

LATER—IMMENSE THRONGS OF SPECTATORS.

All along the route the procession of Page and Wyatt, of the Ninth regiment, was accompanied and followed by an immense crowd, notwithstanding the rain, which was pouring down in torrents. Every window of every house was filled with groups of men and women, who had been patiently waiting all the afternoon for the appearance of the procession. All the stoops of the houses were black with people, and the housetops were lined with hundreds of anxious sight-seers.

THE SCENE OF THE LINE OF MARCH.

About half-past six the funeral train started from the depot. Rumors had become current during the early part of the day that the train would be attacked or thrown from the track, and Superintendent Kelso placed special patrolmen on guard at every block which the railroad traversed. Instead, however, of the train being attacked, almost every cottage in the suburbs and every house outside of town, near the track, had its quota of sympathizers with the regiment, who assembled at the windows and piazzas and testified their respect for the noble dead by piously uncovering until the whole train had passed by.

AT WOODLAWN

the regiment and the escort of police, some two hundred strong, who accompanied it from New York in the capacity of mourners rather than a protection, were met by an immense crowd. The procession to the grave was a very solemn one.

THE RETURN—AT THE ARMORY.

The Ninth returned safely to the city about 10 o'clock, and on its way to the armory was loudly cheered by the people in the streets. At the armory the police and regiment, before parading, cheered one another till they were hoarse. The experience of the Ninth during the past few days has made many hearts sad, but the regiment has undoubtedly gained in popularity since the fatal Wednesday.

THE FUNERAL OF LATTIMER.

The funeral services of Wm. L. Lattimer were held yesterday in the Swedenborgian church, on Thirty-fifth street, between Lexington and Third avenue. He was one of the innocent victims of the riot. The body was not in the church. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends present. Rev. Mr. Keyes preached the sermon, and made a few remarks alluding to the sudden and sad death of Lattimer and the severe affliction to his family. The remains will be conveyed to Albany.

OTHER FUNERALS.

Among other funerals that took place yesterday were: Thomas Sullivan, a victim of the riot. His death was caused by the volley fired by the military. The remains were escorted to the cemetery by the Tweed Benevolent Association.

Charles H. Pettit, the young man who was shot down in the street by a stray bullet, after he had just parted with his affianced bride, in order to make some purchases, was buried from the residence of his uncle, Jas. Morton, No. 362 West Twenty-first street.

James Monohan, also killed by the military, was buried by the Hibernian Society.

Michael Tully was also buried.

Augustus P. Gilbert, a compositor in the Herald office, was buried at Cypress Hill Cemetery

Jas. A. Clark, proprietor of a paper collar manufactory, was buried at Greenwood.

Items Relating to the Riot.

SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER OF THE NINTH.

Edward Coffrey, aged twenty-eight, belonging to Company H, Ninth regiment, and late Hospital Stewart of that regiment, died a terrible death. He was detained on the 12th by his sick wife, and in the evening he was fearfully depressed when he learned of the riot; and on hearing to-day the comments on his absence from the post of danger, he got excited and cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor, expiring immediately.

COMPLIMENTING THE POLICE.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Gov. Hoffman has sent an autograph letter to Superintendent Kelso, warmly complimenting him on the conduct of the entire police force for discipline, bravery, and discretion during the riot.

ACTION OF THE IRISH BRIGADE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the officers of the Irish Brigade Association was held to-day at the Astor House, Colonel Benson presiding, preliminary to a project for a mass meeting of the citizens of New York to give expression to their opinions on the late riot, and the conduct of the authorities. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That as an organization in a great measure representing the Irish society of New York, who fought to sustain the Government of the United States, and gave substantial token of their respect for law and love of liberty, we deeply deplore the calamities of Wednesday, the 12th inst.

SERMONS ON THE RIOT.

Sermons were preached in several of the churches to-day on the riots. Rev. Dr. Northrup, of the Twenty-third-street Presbyterian, said the people had passed through a scene of trouble, and through deadly strife had given those in power assurances that, winning principles to maintain, they must not be recreant to their trust. Peace was worth having and preserving, even at the expense of bloodshed. It was proper that the Hibernians should have their rights and the Orangemen theirs, and nothing less than the rights and liberties of American citizens must be preserved, and if bullets were the only arguments effectual with certain classes, then let bullets be used.

In the absence of the Bishop, who was out of town, Father Conney preached at St. Patrick's Church, from Matthew, seventh chapter. He cautioned the people against false teachers, who, caring only to gain their ends, led them in the path destructive; and without directly naming the instigators of the disturbance, exhorted the people in future to follow the advice of their divinely-commissioned teacher, who always spoke to them for their benefit.

At the Church of St. Paul, Rev. Father Deshaw, speaking in reference to the riots, claimed that priests were divinely ordained as guides to their flocks in matters political as well as spiritual; that it was the duty of the latter to follow the counsels of their clergy, and that they would thus be guarded against error.

At St. Columbus Church Rev. Father Hogerty advised Irishmen to bury the feuds and animosities of the old land, and cultivate friendly relations with Orangemen.

REGULATING STREET PARADES.

In the Board of Police to-day, Commissioner Manierre offered a preamble, declaring that the occupation of the public thoroughfares by parades and processions had grown to be an evil of such magnitude as required police regulation or prohibition, and that such occupation, which is not a right, but only toleration, has become odious and dangerous; therefore,

Resolved, That, excepting parades of the National Guard and funeral processions, no procession, of any kind, shall be permitted to occupy the streets of New York without permission of the Board of Police, in which event the Superintendent shall give an escort and proper protection.

SEEKING LEGAL OPINION.

Commissioner Barr offered a resolution for obtaining legal opinion on the best method of dealing with street processions.

Both resolutions were referred to a committee composed of Bosworth and Barr.

MAYOR HALL ON THE SUBJECT.

Mayor Hall, in seconding Barr's resolution, denied the lawful right of any procession, except the military, to occupy the streets, and said the authorities were perfectly justified in forbidding processions; that it was done, in a recent instance, for a first time, simply shows that the question was never before presented for decision. Never before did any procession engender circumstances threatening a breach of the peace.

On the Mayor's motion three days' leave of absence, in batches of a hundred at a time, was granted patrolmen who faithfully performed their duties on the 12th.

THE ORANGE LEADER BEGGING THAT THE PARADE BE STOPPED.

Among the important documents bearing upon the cause of action first taken by the civil authorities in regard to the recent troubles, there is published this morning a letter written by John J. Bond, Orange leader, to Superintendent Kelso, two days before the riot, in which he implores that functionary to stop the Orange demonstration, and spare the effusion of blood.

TO BE TRIED FOR DENOUNCING THE MILITARY.

Capt. Petty is to be tried to-day. Lieut. Macklin and others belonging to the Eighty-fourth regiment will testify in his behalf.

MORE DEATHS—TWO MORE WOUNDED DIED TO-DAY—HEAVY BAIL.

At Yorkville Police Court this morning, John Mahony, a respectable young man, was arraigned at the bar to answer the charge of felonious assault, committed by him on two officers of the Seventy-first regiment yesterday, while on their way home from the obsequies of young Page. The prisoner said that he was ashamed of the position in which he found himself, but he had no one to blame for it but himself, he having been drunk at the time. He was held in $3,000 to answer.

GOV. HOFFMAN HUNG IN EFFIGY.

A large party of roughs in the Twelfth ward, Brooklyn, hung an effigy in Hamilton avenue this morning bearing a breastplate labeled: "John T. Hoffmann, Governor of New York, died July 12, 1871."

BOSTON, July 17.—Gen. Butler's expressed readiness to accept the nomination for Governor of Massachusetts is not favorably responded to by the leading Boston papers.

The Advertiser thinks it rather early to accept nominations to be made so far ahead, and intimates that Gov. Claflin may be induced, if the political situation demands it, to run again.

The Journal says there is no question but that the Republicans in convention will act with proper discretion and nominate for all offices gentlemen who will strengthen the party and continue its beneficial rule.

LADIES DROWNED.

Miss Ada McEwen, of Lowell, and Miss Ann Cumming, of Portsmouth, N. H., were drowned to-day in Charles river by capsizing their boat.

COREA.

A Surveying Party from the American Squadron Whip two Forts Heavily Armed and Manned.

"Don't be the First to Fire Nor the First to Stop."

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF THE FIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—The following special account of the Corean fight was received by the America from Shanghai, having been brought by the Palos, which left Corea June 8 to get stores and bring up some eight-inch guns from the Ashuelot:

VISIT OF THE NATIVES TO THE FLEET.

The fleet arrived at Jerome Gulf May 20, and report ten days surveying channels between the various islands, and finally coming to anchor at a point designated on the French charts Ile Boiz. For three days the surveying party was away. In that time they met some natives who sent off a communication asking where we were from and hoping we were well. On Monday a number of Coreans of the third and fifth ranks came on board. Governor Low's interpreter received them. They were not of a rank to be received by the Admiral or the Minister. They were shown about the Colorado and distinctly told that we meant to send the surveying party up the river, and that our mission was peaceful, and that we should not attack or molest them unless they first assaulted us.

They expressed themselves as non-committal, and as glad to know that our mission was peaceful, and I believed they were satisfied.

THE SURVEYING PARTY.

On Thursday the Monocacy and Palos, with four steam launches, two from the Colorado and the others from the Alaska and Benicia, left the ship about half past 10 A. M. to go up and past Konghoa, an island at the mouth of the river Salle. The survey party from the Monocacy, under Captain McCrea, numbered 170; from the Palos, under Colonel Rockwell, fifty, and the launches manned eleven men each. Captain Homer C. Blake was on the Palos.

Accompanying the expedition were Mr. Cowle, private secretary to Minister Low. On the Palos, Messrs. R. J. McCaslin and Ed. H. Julesburg. Paymaster Spaulding, of the Palos, was with Lieutenant Totten, and Captain Bowell and Mr. Slossen, of the Colorado, with Lieutenant Mead.

The boat parties were armed with cutlasses, pistols and Remington rifles. The Benicia launch carried a twenty-four-pounder in the bow, and the others were provided with twelve-pounders, all having a good supply of shell, canister and shrapnel.

UP THE RIVER.

Availing themselves of the flood-tide, the launches went ahead abreast up Konghoa river, sounding as they proceeded, the Palos and Monocacy following at a convenient distance. The boats, which were unmolested for some time, prosecuted their work regularly on the river, which is here about a mile wide.

The day was bright and pleasant, and all went well. All approached the narrow portion of the river about ten miles from the Colorado.

A BLEACHED ARMY.

Here a great turnout of white-coated Coreans was noticed on a bluff on the left bank, with flags flying, presenting quite a martial array. A nearer view indicated their number to be about 2,000 men, clothed in white coats, not unlike the present European overcoats, white pajamas, tied at the ankle, with white socks and light summer shoes, such as Chinese wear.

THE FORTS.

There were two red stone forts visible, one on each bank, apparently armed with upwards of sixty-nine eighteen pounders, and guarding the narrow passage or bend in the river. The one on the right bank was the smaller of the two, and was not noticed at all during the fight, except by a shot or two to find if any one was stirring therein; but the main fort, upon the left bank, rising nearly one hundred feet from the water's edge, was evidently the standpoint of the Coreans, from which they expected to intimidate or drive away in dismay the foreigners.

OBSERVING THE ENEMY.

The launches kept on their business, without heeding the spectacle presented on the bank. The Benicia launch had meanwhile dropped astern, owing to the lead-line fouling her screw; so that when the party came opposite the fort she was nearly two miles off.

Mr. Cowle took good observations of the Coreans, and counted more than thirty-six guns in position. Besides these were seen a number of gingalls, carried by two men each. These last, with bannered men, helped to swell the array which formed upon the side and top of the hills behind the stone wall.

THE FIGHT.

The turning point of the river was now almost reached, and when at a distance of about one hundred and fifty yards from the shore, was poured from the large fort, followed in a few moments by the discharge of guns from the fort on the right bank. The launches were at once turned, their bows on the main fort, and their guns quickly replied, while the Palos and Monocacy, coming up on a five-knot tide, rattled away over the heads of the flotilla with their eight-inch rifled guns.

A STREAM OF FIRE

ARTILLERY PRACTICE.

Lieut. Commander Rockwell, with the Palos, made splendid practice with the bow guns, while Captain McCrea, who followed in the Monocacy, gave the enemy the full benefit of his broadside battery at close quarters, so close that the vessel grazed some hidden rocks which formed a reef just above the bend of the river. Notwithstanding this accident, which displaced an iron plate, and caused her to leak, she kept up a steady fire until the forts were silenced.

WHIPPED IN TEN MINUTES.

During the action there was little or no breeze, and a thick smoke from shore and the river almost hid the combatants. At intervals, however, was noticed red sand with mortar from the walls, flying off in clouds, as shells burst in the works, and in ten minutes from the commencement of the firing the Coreans were driven back over the hill.

ORDERS OF THE ADMIRAL.

Admiral Rodgers had said before the surveying party left his ship: "Don't fire unless you are fired upon, but if you are fired upon don't be the first to stop firing."

There were no orders given to land, so that, after Captain Blake had satisfied himself as to the discomfiture of the enemy, the gunboats and launches were ordered to move round the bend and anchor a short distance above the scene of action.

THE CASUALTIES.

The only casualties reported were on the Alaska's launch. A sailor was in the act of pointing a howitzer when a ball struck him on the side of the head and shoulder; another had two fingers cut off by the recoil of a gun.

It seems strange that with such hot and close firing on the part of the Coreans such small damage should result, but it is believed that this fortunate issue for the boats was owing to the larger guns on the forts being elevated too much for the gunboats, and the launches were all more or less struck by balls, and many narrow escapes took place, but fortunately none were badly hurt.

COOL CONDUCT.

After the boats had rounded the point the Coreans returned to their guns, and in time to open fire upon the launch of the Benicia, which was delayed and left behind. Master Schroeder, who was in charge of the launch, did not hesitate to force a passage against all odds, and join his companions; and soon as fire from the fort was delivered he coolly returned the fire, and pushed on up the river.

A PARTING SALUTE ASTONISHING THE NATIVES.

At slackwater the boats headed down stream again, but before they started on their return to the squadron a few shells were thrown over the hill into the fort. This procedure settled affairs for that day. The Coreans finding their forts of no use, even around a corner and out of sight, concluded to evacuate. They were seen marching out of the works in single file, and making a short route to the woods in the rear.

The work of the surveying party being concluded, the vessels returned to the squadron without further molestation.

A COREAN EXCUSE FOR MURDER.

YOKOHAMA, June 23.—It is reported that during the recent fight between the gunboats Monocacy and Palos and the Corean forts, a note signed by the Chief Counsellor of the King was sent to our boats by a messenger, which stated that the Coreans refused to hold any intercourse whatever with foreign nations, and that the crew of the American ship General Sherman were put to death under the laws of the land because they were guilty of piracy and murder after they had been shipwrecked.

AWAITING INSTRUCTIONS.

Our vessels returned to their anchorage after receiving this letter, and taking as clear a survey of the forts as possible, Admiral Rodgers now awaits further instructions from Washington.

Meyer, in Greenwich street, where two hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of merchandise is stored, were busily engaged Saturday afternoon cutting through the walls. A porter heard the noise raised by their operations, gave the alarm, and the burglars fled; but one of them, calling himself Wm. King, was captured after a desperate struggle.

BILLIARD CHALLENGE TO THE WORLD.

Cyrille Dion has issued a notice in which he challenges any one in the world to play him a game of three-ball or French carom billiards, the amount of the stakes to be not less than $500 a side. It is thought in billiard circles that an international contest will be the result of his challenge.

THE ERIE RAILROAD LITIGATION.

New York Stock and Money Market.

NEW YORK, July 17—P. M.

The Gold market was weaker to-day; opening 112⅝ and closing at 112⅜. Loans were made at 1@2 ℔ cent.

The gold clearances to-day at the Gold Exchange Bank were $34,500,000.

The reports of light shipments of gold to-morrow helped decline the market.

The Government bond market has been dull but firm. Ten-forties advanced slightly. Treasury officials say that Secretary Boutwell will suspend the further purchase of bonds should they remain above par in gold.

In Stock there was not enough done to give tone to the market list, excepting in Erie, Pittsburgh and Union Pacific, which are steady but dull, the first two advancing and the latter breaking to 28⅜ under sales by the bears, who raided this stock, hoping to create a general decline. A good number of professional speculators are out of town and the cliques are holding on patiently in the hope of securing the short interest. The back-bone of the market is Lake Shore, which is held by a strong pool. The market closed dull but firm.

Money is plentiful at 2@3 ℔ cent.

State securities are dull, excepting Missouris and Tennessees, which are strong and active.

Sterling exchange, bankers' bills, 110¼.

JEFFERSONVILLE.

Johnny Russell, late clerk for Mr. Goldback, who has been ill for sometime, died yesterday evening.

Paul Dewey, a son of Judge Dewey, deceased, was, on yesterday, adjudged a lunatic and taken to the insane asylum.

Mr. Harry Williamson, late of this city, and Mr. George B. Wools, brother of the editor of the National Democrat, arrived here a few days ago from California, where they are now both living.

From what we have heard intimated, the largest docket ever known in the Criminal Court will be that of the coming term. No less than 500 liquor cases, from this city alone, will be called.

The youngest child of Dr. Lod W. Beckwith died yesterday. The child was quite an interesting one, and its death falls heavily upon its parents. Many are the sympathising friends to help mourn the loss.

All the regular trains on the Ohio and Mississippi railroad ran prompt on time yesterday, notwithstanding the great change of the day before in narrowing the track from this point to North Vernon.

In the Police Court yesterday Mart. Johnson and Martin Noon were each fined $14 50 for disorderly conduct. Charles North plead guilty to the charge of drunkenness, and fined $7 90. On good representations, North was released on his own recognizance.

A young lady, daughter of J. P. Winesburg, of this city, died yesterday morning. Miss Winesburg was a great favorite of those who knew her, an interesting and lovely girl to society, and her death will be bad news to her many friends, the citizens generally, and an irreparable loss to the community.

Mrs. Rebecca Morrison, relict of John Morrison, was reported dying yesterday, at her residence, in Aurora, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison were among the old pioneers of that county, and are known by everybody in that section. Mrs. Morrison is the grandmother of Mr. Reuben Daily, the irregular Jeffersonville reporter of this paper, and he and his family left yesterday, for Aurora, on the reception of the news.

John Harvey, a stranger in this community, was detected yesterday by Mr. John W. Kane, carriage maker on Chestnut street, in entering the office of the shop under suspicious circumstances. Mr. Kane arrested the man and delivered him into the custody of policeman Sibert. The case was called at 2½ o'clock before 'Squire Moore, and the defendant was committed to jail in default of bail in the sum of $200 on the charge of stealing a piece of cloth from Mr. Kane, valued at twenty cents. The charge seemed to be a small matter, but the circumstances attending the case point out plainly that an old offender is in custody, or that the man is a lunatic.

The Weather Report.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Probabilities—The conditions are favorable for local storms to-night from Missouri to Tennessee. Threatening weather, with light rain, will probably extend during the night over the Carolinas, with severe local storms. Pleasant weather will probably continue from the lower lakes to the Atlantic. The low barometer in the extreme northwest will probably extend to Lake Huron by Tuesday evening, with local storms west of Lake Michigan.

Sentenced for Blackmailing — Irish Meeting.

The river was about stationary yesterday evening with 20 inches in the pass down the Indian chute, and 8 feet 8 inches in the canal. The rain night before last will cause another slight rise. It will not, however, affect the river a great deal at this point, but will keep the river from declining for several days. Yesterday was a clear and delightfully pleasant day. At 6 P. M. the mercury stood at 80°. Special telegrams to the COURIER-JOURNAL report the condition of the weather and the Ohio and Mississippi and their tributaries, at various points.

In St. Louis, on Thursday, the tax collector levied upon the marine railway and dry docks at Carondelet for taxes, amounting to $300. Seventy-five thousand feet of lumber was taken. The company claim exemption from taxation under a contract with the former city of Carondelet. Deputies went down to levy upon the Kingsland iron works for tax bills amounting to $8,000, but the company paid up under protest, and were let off.

The Ironton Journal gives the following as the amount of wharfage collected at the Ironton wharf during the quarter ending June 30, 1871: April—Canal-boats, $6; flatboats, $3; wharfboats, $15 50; steamboats, $270; total, $300 50. Charles M. Scott, while in Washington, dropped into the room occupied by the supervising inspectors of steamboats, whom he addressed in a half hour's speech, giving his opinion upon various subjects. Mr. Scott believes the chief remedy for the frequent occurrence of steamboat disasters is the licensing of steamboat commanders. If, says Mr. Scott, the commander is competent, he will have competent subordinates. As illustration of this he refers to the steamboating career of two deceased captains of Mississippi boats, John C. Swon and Billy Forsyth, and two still living—Tom Leathers and John Cannon. Of course, he could name many others, dead and living, but these will serve as an illustration of his argument. He wants the commanders and mates to be licensed, as well as the pilots and engineers. Whatever efforts he has made, or may make, to bring about this requirement are not made as the agent of any pilots' association, but solely on his own responsibility, and for the good of his class and the public in general.

The following is an official list of the names of engineers that have been licensed at the port of Louisville for the year ending June 30, 1871:

There are over a hundred springs in the grounds, but of these only fifteen or twenty are ready for use. Those who have visited these springs do not require any statement of the curative properties of the waters, and a short residence will soon convice strangers of their value.

Since the proprietors have come into possession of the grounds, they have been steadily employed in improving and embellishing the [illegible]. Since last September they have built a three-story block of cottages [illegible] splendid and containing about [illegible] feet long, and back and front [illegible] rooms, with private bath-[illegible] house, with ten bath-rooms, eight for regular baths, and two for shower baths, with dressing-rooms attached to each.

Matter of this description is of a purely private and business character, relating to the interests of individuals and not coming under the head of news. KENTUCKY NEWS.

The Warren Deposit Bank was organized at Bowling Green on Tuesday last, and put in operation on a capital of $25,000. Dr. T. B. Wright is the president and Mr. C. S. Smallhouse, late of Rumsey, the cashier.

Mr. Nathan Allan, for many years a citizen of Smith's Grove, Warren county, and probably the oldest man in the county, died on Thursday last. He was born in Augusta county, Va., October 16, 1781, and was, therefore, in the ninetieth year of his age. He has resided at Smith's Grove since 1835, and was one of the most successful farmers in Warren county.

Lexington is excited over an attempted murder and highway robbery. A man from Scott county, named Sharp, came to Lexington, bringing a quantity of eggs and poultry to sell. While there, he fell into the company of Taylor Harper, who, after getting Mr. Sharp to drink several times with him, led him to an unfrequented portion of the city, and there tapped him several times over the head with a large hickory stick, knocking him senseless. After this he robbed the prostrate form of the Scott county farmer. Mr. Sharp was discovered soon after, and told what had been done and the perpetrator's name. Harper was arrested, had an examining trial, and was sent on for trial, bail being required in the sum of $700. Harper committed the crime to secure a brass watch and twenty dollars, belonging to Mr. Sharp. Harper is one of a band of three who, but a short time ago, were released from a term in the penitentiary. One of them is back in the State prison. Harper will certainly be sent there, and the police are waiting for the third. Sharp is fearfully wounded—one side of his face being swollen to a tremendous size, his mouth was smashed, the upper lip being cut through, and the palate bones fractured. There was also a wound on the left side of the head.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

The white population of Maryland is set down by the census at 605,417.

Rich specimens of gold ore have recently been taken from the Hearne mine, in Stanley county, North Carolina.

The State of Mississippi has donated $4,000 bonus per mile for every mile of railroad constructed in that State prior to January 1st, 1873.

The Charlotte (N. C.) Bulletin reports a public well in that city, "used for the deposit of infants;" arms, legs, &c., have been taken from the well.

Petitions are in circulation in Richmond, Va., asking the Governor to pardon ex-Mayor Chahoon, recently sent to the penitentiary for two years.

Mr. Jonas Jones, a highly-esteemed citizen of Onslow county, N. C., was, on July 10th, struck by lightning while sitting in his door, and instantly killed.

Dick Ashby, a black negro, of Norfolk, Va., has been arrested on complaint of his daughter, a girl sixteen years of age, who charges him with attempting to violate her person.

The old city of Alexandria, Virginia, is taking a new start. A number of new buildings are in process of erection, and rapid improvements are going on everywhere in the city.

A remarkable family lives in Dallas county, Ark. The father is 108 years old, the mother 106, and the two are the parents of twenty-nine children—fifteen boys and fourteen girls.

The question of making the University of Virginia a free school, and so increasing the State annuity as to dispense with tuition fees for Virginia students is being canvassed in the Virginia papers.

Marianna, Florida, boasts a mule which has been frequently shot and three times struck by lightning. The animal is in good health, and can kick a pair of spectacles off a man's nose without touching him.

An apportionment of $81,000 to be divided among the various counties of Virginia for school purposes is announced. The school population amounts to 404,952, about one-third of the entire population of Virginia.

Halifax county, Va., beats 'em all. A lady of that county, who, year before last, was the mother of three boys at a time—all dead—was, week before last, the mother of four boy babies—all hearty and kicking—and everybody "doing well."

Last year 2,200 scholars attended the public schools of Savannah, Ga.—average tuition per scholar $5 05. The Catholics and all other denominations are under the same administration. In Columbus, Ga., the average cost per scholar was $10 97.

The thirteenth session of the American Pomological Society is to be held in the city of Richmond, Va., September 6—8, 1871. All horticultural, pomological, agricultural, and other kindred institutions, in the United States and British provinces, are invited to send delegates.

Kansas City, Mo., boasts a blacksmith who has a wicked son. The blacksmith, when spoken to about the tremendous muscle of his right arm, points to his boy and says: "More muscle was developed on this arm correcting that infernal boy, than ever plying the hammer brought forth."

On the 16th of July, seventy-nine years ago, the first County Court of Knox county was held in Knoxville, Tenn. The city and county was then comparatively a wilderness. In the short space of seventy-nine years the growth of the prosperous city of Knoxville attests what a wonderful change has been wrought.

Last Thursday afternoon, near Harris' mill, Miss., two brothers were in a wagon, driving a yoke of oxen, when, at the forks of a road, the oxen wanted to go one way (toward home) and the brothers the other. The result was the wagon struck a stump, jolting the men out. One leaves a wife and several children. The other is all right, with the exception of a broken collar-bone—the oxen went home.

The losses by fire within the city limits of Baltimore, from January 1st to July 1st, 1871, amounted to the large aggregate of $439,214. Outside of the city limits the damages, for which alarms were sounded in the city by the alarm telegraph, amounted to $111,100, making the total loss $550,314. For the same period of time in 1870 the loss was only $45,121 18, showing an increase for the present year of over half a million.

The Petersburg (Va.) Courier has had laid upon its table "a large tomato, raised near the city, and bearing in its conformation a striking resemblance to the head and beak of a crow." The Courier pronounces the beak perfect, "even in the delicate tints that mark its points." The Courier has also seen another freak of nature in the way of a four-eared cat, with the third and fourth ears very perfect in their formation.

The Tarboro (N. C.) Southerner says: "The Strabane plantation in this county witnessed on Saturday last a very sad occurrence. On that day three negro children, two boys and a girl, respectively aged about eight, eleven, and thirteen, were fishing on the banks of Fishing creek. By some mishap the boy missed his foothold and fell in the water. His brother jumped in the creek to save the boy, but failing to do so, was followed for the same purpose by the girl, the oldest one of the three. She too was unable to effect a rescue, and in the attempt was drowned together with the boys.

A "spirited widow" has been making things quite lively at Wadesboro, N. C. She was put in jail for biting and scratching her mother and sister; and one day last week a change of cells becoming necessary, the magistrate, constable and jailer undertook to remove her. The magistrate retired, with an arm frightfully bitten, the constable did the same, severely bruised by his head coming in contact with a bottle "deftly slung" by the charming widow, and of the three the jailer was the only one that did not leave hastily, a fearful kick from the "lively old girl" rendering him breathless on the floor of the cell. What became of him is not stated: the last account from the scene of the row, was, that the widow was practicing on his prostrate form with a chisel.

An illustration of the workings of the "Enforcement Law" in the South comes from Virginia. Dr. Charles Gillion, an estimable gentleman, of Chesterfield county, in that State, employed several colored laborers on his farm, expressly stipulating that they were not to neglect their business on account of political matters, etc. While he was busy planting his crop—and it was of prime importance to get in his seed—these men, though particularly requested not to do so, deserted their work to his loss and injury, went off to some election precinct to vote, and staid away all day. At the end of the month (they were employed by the month), Dr. Gillion paid and discharged the men—as he had a perfect right to do. For the crime of discharging faithless employes, not wanting their services, and not being willing to submit to their violation of promise and duty, Dr. Gillion has been arrested and held to bail in the sum of $1,000. Such is the treatment imposed upon the best and most worthy citizens of the South by the devilish malignity of a pack of Radical hell-hounds.

Our Harrodsburg correspondent, in his letter this morning, sets Gov. LESLIE right in regard to his speech at that place. He did not say that Gen. LEWIS' constituents refused to return him to the Legislature because of his vote in favor of the Cincinnati railroad bill, but he showed very conclusively that in giving that vote Gen. LEWIS opposed the wishes of his people, and that Gov. LESLIE's vote in opposition expressed the popular and almost universal feeling of the voters of Barren county. Gov. LESLIE acted very properly in his course on this bill. He opposed it because he believed he was right in doing so, and because it was the unmistakable desire of his constituents.

In another column we print Mr. EDGAR NEEDHAM's remarks on a recent article of ours upon his Bowling Green speech. His reply reads too much like his speech to give entire satisfaction. On the question of the tariff he still fails to face the music squarely. What we are after is an expression of Mr. NEEDHAM's opinion about this portion of our laws. If we go to his speech to find out what he thinks of it we shall find that he regards it as an affair to praise and defend rather than to condemn and reform. And yet, he calls himself a Revenue Reformer. Alas! if all Revenue reformers were of such lukewarm speech as Mr. NEEDHAM, the country might well despair of any change for the better, at least so long as General GRANT holds office. Both in his speech and in his communication Mr. NEEDHAM appears as an advocate rather than as an out and out opponent of our present tariff system. Not one word of objection to the principle on which it was founded, no fearless exposure of its evil effects. At this late hour we are unable to pursue the subject further, but, like Mr. NEEDHAM, we shall continue to occupy ourselves with his tariff views until we think the subject exhausted.

A Radical Trick.

The recent riot, its causes and its circumstances, continues to fill the columns of the New York press. Considering all that has happened, there seems no reason to doubt that the Superintendent of Police, KELSO, knew his business best when he undertook to prevent the chance of a mob by stopping a parade which was sure to produce one. There was really but one sure way to stay the effusion of blood, and that was by removing the cause of disturbance.

No religious question whatever should be allowed to enter into the dicussion. The Society of Orange is not a representative of Protestantism. It is composed mainly of foreigners, who do not owe allegiance to this country, and who even when naturalized confess but a limited allegiance. Their existence is a constant menace to the Irish people. They themselves are the descendants of carpet-baggers who have preyed upon Ireland for a couple of centuries. Their public displays overflow with insults to a conquered people. It is true that they are Protestants and that the mass of the Irish are Catholics. But they are also adherents of the English government as against Irish freedom, and the question of patriotism is enlisted much stronger in the matter than the question of religion. Nothing could be stupider on the part of Americans than the disposition to make a church case out of it. It is as if the Radicals in the South should celebrate LEE's surrender every year with odious decorations and inscriptions. No one will dispute the right to parade; but the public order is more important than any mere abstract right. If a body of men set out with arms to browbeat another party of men, and, if resisted, to kill them, they are estopped at once by the law. But may not banners be as effective agents of insult and disturbance as arms?

The late rioters were ignorant and excited and in most cases vicious persons. To say a word in behalf of them would be to defend murderers and murder. The strength of the Irish intelligence and the organization of the Catholic Church should have been sufficient to check the ferocious spirit of mob violence. But they did not, and there was every reason to believe they would or could not, and so the conservative arm of the law, as a prevention, was the most certain method. The right of one class of citizens to publicly insult another class every year seems a questionable right. Certainly it is a dangerous one to be exercised. The policy of sustaining by public opinion a public exultation of national calamity is a reproach rather than an encouragement to genuine tolerance. Under pretense of celebrating a Protestant triumph the Orangemen really parade the vanquishment of their countrymen, and they do this at the cost of disturbing the peace of a people in no wise interested in their foreign broils. That Governor HOFFMAN carried out an American principle with rare courage is plain enough. But he carried it out at a fearful cost to protect an association that has little claim on our respect or sympathy. Mr. KELSO's order was tyrannical, but it would have saved all the lives that were lost and preserved the public order. The question narrows itself down to the preservation of order by suppressing a parade intended to insult a great mass of ignorant and excited people and the assertion of a naked abstraction at the cost of many lives and the peace of a great metropolis; and this is a very nice question in civil ethics. The debate in the New York papers is interesting. The point we wish to make, however, refers to the disposition to get up a religious excitement about it.

In a country like ours, and in an age as advanced, as enlightened and as skeptical as this, nothing is more unlikely than the domination of any religious sect. The effort to get up a "no-Popery" spirit is ridiculous. The Catholic Church has its uses and abuses, and, like every great organization, is a mixture of good and ill. So far as it threatens the souls of men we are indifferent, because we are not engaged in the soul-saving line of business. As far as it threatens the State we are interested, and whenever we think we see it making any dangerous encroachments on the Constitution or the body politic we shall have something to say. But the man is a lunatic or bigot who pretends that there is any such danger, and the outcry raised through the agency of the late riot is simply Know-Nothingism in a new dress, a Radical and Puritanical outcry designed to operate as a political agent on rural opinion in New York, and to take the State out of the hands of the Democracy.

The Radicals are trying to use the riot of Wednesday for their own selfish purposes. They have no hope of getting the Irish vote. Therefore they want to make the Irish as odious as possible, to array every conceivable prejudice against them, and ultimately to reconstruct New York. The articles in the Tribune and the cartoons in Harper's Weekly are conclusive on this point, and the outbreak of last week—unjustifiable and savage as it was—is good food for both papers. They will use it as they are using Kukluxism, not only to the just censure of the rioters but to the censure of the Democratic party and the Catholic Church, which are as little responsible for the bloody work that was done as the Southern people are for the acts of violence which have disturbed our domestic peace.

In conclusion, we have a word to say to those over-sensitive persons who are ever ready to accuse us of bias for or against this or that religious sect, because of our unvarying habit of speaking of them all with entire freedom and candor. We have given, we are sorry to say, more offense to the Catholics than to any other sect. Only last week an article on the "non-infallibility" movement in Germany, which we meant to be a fair presentment of the case, and which we believe to have been such, gave great disquiet to some of our Catholic readers. But a little while before we were called upon by a deputation of Catholics to remonstrate against certain expressions which they said implied a deep-seated hostility to them. Last winter Mr. WEBB abused us like a pickpocket in his paper, because of a piece of miscellany which we had published that disturbed the Catholic imagination. Still later we have learned from a highly fanciful Protestant source that we ourselves are a devout Catholic (heaven bless the mark, we wish we were devout in anything, even in Catholicism, and, indeed, we might be much more so than we are without serious damage!) and are using the COURIER-JOURNAL to defend the Catholic Church(?)

All this is stuff and nonsense. We care nothing about any sect, as a sect, and, if we did, should confine our predilection to ourselves. A daily newspaper is no place for sectarian topics. We want to do the fair and liberal thing by them all. But we shall not be particular in our comments on current events, and if we happen to tread on corns we can't help it. Our readers can be assured that we have no religious ends to serve. More's the pity. We wish we had.

The Jeff. Davis Slander.

That was a very scandalous story which the Louisville Commercial told the other day of Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS. We are surprised that so respectable a journal should have lent itself to the circulation of so cheap and yet so serious a scandal, even against that arch-fiend of the Radicals, JEFFERSON DAVIS.

We are not quite sure that we can give the readers of the COURIER-JOURNAL the merest outlines of the story without a blush, but it is necessary to our purpose that we should do so, and we will try.

For the last two or three years Mr. DAVIS has been a boarder at the Peabody House, in Memphis. Not long since, as the story goes, he left that city for Huntsville, Alabama. In company with him was a married lady, who was also a boarder at the Peabody House. They traveled in a sleeping-car. About half-past eight o'clock in the evening—an unconscionably early hour for retiring at this season of the year—Mr. DAVIS ordered the porter of the car to prepare two berths, an upper and a lower one, for himself and the lady, whom he said was traveling under his charge. The berths being prepared, the lady took the lower one and he the upper one. In the meantime, the other passengers, some ten or a dozen in number, were sitting around enjoying themselves in pleasant conversation. Very soon the curtain which shut in the berths occupied by Mr. DAVIS and the lady were observed to be unnecessarily agitated. The attention of the conductor of the car, "Mr. HESS," was called to the singular phenomenon, and on investigating the thing, that inquisitive gentleman discovered that Mr. DAVIS and the lady were occupying the same berth. "Git out of that," exclaimed peremptorily the indignant "Mr. HESS." "I shan't do it—it's none of your business," said Mr. DAVIS. Whereupon "Mr. HESS" called to his assistance the conductor of the train; and Mr. DAVIS was made to vamose the ranche and take his own proper berth. Such, substantially, is the story as told in the columns of the Louisville Commercial.

And now, where is the man who, knowing Mr. DAVIS, will believe one word of it? Of all the very prominent men in this country, there is not one who guards his reputation with such vestal vigilance as does Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS. From his first entrance into the political arena in Mississippi, down to the close of that career upon the fall of Richmond, he so conducted himself that his fair fame was never tarnished by the slightest breath of scandal. As a young and rising Senator in Congress he held his own among the most virtuous and upright of public men. The blandishments of beauty, in a field where the charms of "woman, dear, divine," proverbially win all hearts that are to be won, were never known to have achieved the slightest triumph over the fiery but stern statesman of Mississippi. He passed through all the allurements of the Federal capital with no blot upon his name.

Mr. DAVIS may be rash, but he is not a fool. He is a man who is known "where'er the birds of fame have flown," and that he would so far forget what is due to his reputation, and to the cause he once represented, as to be guilty of the conduct attributed to him by his political enemy, the Louisville Commercial, is utterly incredible. It is a story for the marines; but the marines themselves must feel insulted at the thought that such an absurd story should be told for their belief. They know that all men are weak and fallible, and that the best of them are liable to yield to temptation; but whether they be Federal or Confederate marines, they know that no man of Mr. DAVIS' reputation and personal integrity could be persuaded, even by the most beautiful and seductive of houris, to play the bold, unblushing part attributed to Mr. DAVIS.

We are told that when "Mr. HESS," conductor of the sleeping-car, had failed by threats and persuasion to induce Mr. DAVIS to retire to his own berth, the conductor of the train was called to the scene, and that he speedily compelled the ex-President of the Southern Confederacy to retire to his virtuous couch above. This is not the least incredible part of the ridiculous story. Mr. DAVIS is not the man to be forced to do anything he may be inclined not to do. He is not the man to submit quietly to the dictation of a railroad conductor or of anybody else. If he had been found in the wrong berth and had chosen to stay there, he would have stayed. That we are told that he quietly yielded to the commands of one who could have had no authority whatever in the sleeping-car, is enough to convince us that the whole story is false, even if there were not other and stronger evidence of the fact.

The Radical press will never cease to believe that the rebellion is not dead, and that Mr. DAVIS is the head and front of it still, and no opportunity will be lost to stab the festering corpse of secession through him. We are convinced that this story of the sleeping-car and the wakeful beauty is a slander upon Mr. DAVIS, instigated by partisan hatred of him and of the cause he once represented.

Mr. DAVIS, as we have already said, is human, and is, therefore, not infallible; but he is a man who has always been more than ordinarily jealous of his reputation—so much so, indeed, that through all the long years of his public career his private character has always been far above reproach—and to believe that there is the slightest foundation for this story is to believe that he has taken leave of the last vestige of his senses and is a fit subject for the madhouse.

☞ The New York Tribune declares that "the Executive who distributes offices at the back door lays himself open to the suspicion of jobbery." This is true; but, in justice to the present Executive, it must be said that he avoids such suspicion by distributing all offices at the front door, and taking in the quid pro quo at the same entrance.

Satonin, the Active Principle of the Semen Contra.

Wintersmith's Worm Candy or Santonin Lozenges is made of pure sugar and pure santonin. This is a safe, agreeable and efficient remedy for worms, santonin being the active principle of the semen contra, the well-known effectual vermifuge. All the popular worm candies of the day depend for their efficacy upon the amount of santonin they contain, but in these it is found in varying proportions, and of uncertain purity, and very often again in combination with other elements unknown to the physician, and often hazardous in their nature; the only merit claimed for these lozenges is the ascertained purity of the ingredients and their thorough and careful distribution, so that each lozenge contains its exact portion of santonin; the materials have been so compounded that the lozenge will stand unaltered by time or climate; the boxes are made of wood and are entirely impervious to moisture from any atmosphere. It is not a secret nostrum, but is prescribed by all intelligent physicians.

[Testimony of a Physician.]

NEWBURG, IND.

I have been selling Wintersmith's Worm Candy or Santonin Lozenges, and those using it have so far reported it as being superior to anything of the kind ever used by them. I cheerfully prescribe it as a very convenient and satisfactory way of using santonin.

Our prayer is that the bright-winged messengers from the realms of glory may bear to her palpitating heart the benediction fresh and warm from Jehovah's lips, wreath her fair brow with twining laurels as an earnest of life's victory won, and let the day-spring from on high illuminate her pathway from this holy hour till the angel sisterhood shall welcome her redeemed spirit to the citadel of God. For him, whose honor now stands in pledge to love and cherish this precious gift of heaven's bounty, affix the signet of perpetual fidelity to the vow his lips have uttered, that his fortunes, in time and in eternity, may be inseparably blended with hers, in union growing into life eternal. GENTLEMEN—It affords me pleasure to add my testimony to the wonderful effects of your truly excellent medicine—Rosadalis. After suffering for two years from a shattered constitution, with scarcely a hope of restoration to my usual health, I was induced to try your Rosadalis. MISCELLANEOUS.

A Card—In the Matter of Mr. S. Loebenstein.

MR. LOEBENSTEIN was lately arrested on a criminal charge, and, waiving examination, gave bail for his appearance at the Circuit Court to answer an indictment.

For this he has been blamed by some of his friends, who say that his course amounts to an admission of guilt. I write this card in order to take upon myself the whole blame for this act. Mr. Loebenstein came to me, in charge of the City Marshal, under a warrant for embezzlement, and explained to me that, as agent of the New York Continental Life Insurance Company, he had withheld from the collected premiums in his hands a sum which he claimed as compensation under his contract, and that the company, on his refusal to give up his money, had caused his arrest. He knew so little about the nature of the proceedings that he had to be told that warrant was criminal, not civil.

Consulting my own taste in the matter on the one hand, and feeling, moreover, certain that no indictment would or could ever be found, and that my client might be saved the annoyance of a police court trial, I told him off-hand to give bail and went with him for Mr. Hecht, who gave it for him without a moment's hesitation.

I feel sure that nobody who saw Mr. Loebenstein on the morning of his arrest would have concluded from his demeanor that he felt guilty of any wrong, moral or legal. As he is and considers himself amply solvent, he could of course entertain no fraudulent intention in withholding the sum in contest, as he can easily be made to pay whatever he owes.

CherokeePills No2

For the Removal of Obstructions and the Insurance of Regularity in the Recurrence of Monthly Periods.

These pills are an unfailing Female Regulator, intended for special cases; those obstinate ones where milder and cheaper medicines fail.

They are composed of the most active and powerful principles of plants, roots, and berries, so highly concentrated that each pill contains more medicinal strength than a whole box or bottle of ordinary dollar medicine in the market. Although powerful, yet so mild and pleasant in their operation that the most feeble can take them with perfect safety.

☞ They may be safely used at any age and at any period, EXCEPT DURING THE FIRST THREE MONTHS, during which the unfailing nature of their action would infallibly PREVENT pregnancy.

☞ All letters seeking information or advice will be promptly, freely, and discreetly answered.

☞ Each box contains about 100 pills, and is wrapped in white paper, printed in deep red letters, with full and explicit directions inclosed.

☞ Sent by mail, free of postage, on receipt of price, $5 per box.

☞ The Cherokee Pills No 2 are sold by all enterprising druggists in the civilized world. Some unprincipled dealers, however, try to sell worthless compounds in place of this, those which they can purchase at a cheap price, and make more money. As you value your health, do not be deceived by such unprincipled Druggists; ask for these $5 pills, and take no others. If the Druggist will not buy them for you, inclose the money in a letter, and we will send them to you by mail, free of postage, securely sealed from observation.

Ladies or Gentlemen can address us in perfect confidence, stating fully and plainly their diseases and symptoms. Patients need not hesitate because of their inability to visit us, as we have treated patients successfully in all portions of the civilized globe, by correspondence.

Patients addressing us will please state plainly all the symptoms, and write Post-office, County, State and name of writer, and inclose postage stamp for reply.

☞ We desire to send our thirty-two page pamphlet, entitled "Man and Woman as Invalids," to every reader of this paper. Send address, with Stamp to pay return postage, and address as follows:

LITERARY.

Pink and White Tyranny.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's latest work is an ideal story of a very imaginative cast. Her style is occasionally flippant, but for the most part sprightly and graceful. There is frequently to be detected an air of consciousness that sometimes amounts to affectation; and there is no question but that, in spite of the piquant illustrations of a clever artist, the story drags. Whenever Mrs. Stowe attempts to paint from nature, she invariably succeeds; and it is to this rare faculty, wisely indulged, that the success of her previous books is due; but when she attempts to evolve some unknown monstrosity from the depths of her inner consciousness, she is unequal to the task. The hero and heroine in her present book are painfully and elaborately drawn, but the weakness and silliness of the man are inconsistent with his firmness and adherence to principle; while the sharpness and cunning of the woman are too unevenly displayed to make us believe that the character here represented is anything but a lay figure that Mrs. Stowe would have us believe represents the fashionable wife of the present first society. Very differently does another character stand out in the pages of the story. In some quiet New England village, full of crystallized culture and refinement, where Mrs. Stowe is far more at home than in the fashionable circles of shoddy aristocracy, she has known and appreciated the prototype of Grace Seymour; and has transferred her bodily, as it were, into her book, where she moves and breathes a living presence, a joy and a benediction to all who know her. It is for such sketches as these, so true, so life-like, to be found in all of Mrs. Stowe's books, that we can recommend this story, as containing much that cannot fail to interest and please, without instituting a comparison with any of her previous works. The present novel is published in a very attractive style by Roberts Brothers, and is for sale by John P. Morton & Co.

Pioneer Biography.

The Ohio Valley Historical Series, comprising eight beautifully-printed octavo volumes, will remain a lasting monument to their disinterested publisher, Mr. Robert Clarke, of Cincinnati. In them he has preserved much of great value for those who would understand the history of the Great West; and we are truly sorry that lack of support has obliged him to discontinue the series, while so much remains of equal interest and importance that ought to be rescued from oblivion now, ere it be too late. Mr. Clarke, in announcing the suspension of the publication of these works, expresses surprise and some disappointment that their greatest sale has been at the East. We do not know why our people have failed to secure for themselves the solid pleasure and delight that they might find in these volumes. The early history of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky is full of the brave deeds of fearless men; and the account of their exploits is thrilling in the extreme. One would think that their descendants, and the inhabitants of those places around whose homes the names of these noble pioneers still linger in household tradition, would be glad to secure some authentic and complete account of these heroes. It should be the pride of every Kentuckian whose means will permit it to have a set of these books in his house; that if he himself is familiar with the spirited and adventurous history of those who cleared his lands and conquered the wilderness for him, his children may also learn to respect their memories and emulate their virtues. Yet, we venture to say that even in our city, excepting the set belonging to the Louisville Library Association, there are not three complete editions to be found of this historical series, that is of such universal value and pre-eminent local interest. Considered separately and apart from their historical value, few more entertaining books have been published since these made their first appearance. The two volumes of Pioneer Biography, by James McBride, will be found to be brimful of the most exciting and remarkable adventures. The story of Robert McClellan, whose activity, bravery, and skill were wonderful, is particularly full of scenes of wild adventure, hair-breadth escapes, and desperate peril. His exploits, while acting as a scout and spy for General Wayne's army, were marked by unparalleled bravery and audacity. He was able to surpass the swift-footed Indian in running, and was his equal in all the mysteries of woodcraft and cunning warfare. The account of his fight with a single companion against over twenty Indians, and his rescue of a young white girl from their hands, who had been ten years a captive, we would quote, but for lack of space. The curious reader will also find in these volumes a sketch of Capt. John C. Symmes, whose theory of concentric spheres and belief that the earth is open at the poles and hollow, and probably inhabitable within, excited so much comment through the country about the year 1820. Though he spent the last ten years of his life in publicly declaring his theory, he was unable to obtain the means to fit out an exploration of the internal hollow which was popularly called Symmes' Hole, but which he confidently asserted and ingeniously maintained had a real existence. For fuller details in connection with the lives of the men whose names we have mentioned, as well as of many others who likewise did noble service to their country, we must refer our readers to the volumes themselves.

CHICAGO.

What a Louisvillian Saw in the Wickedest City—Its Churches, Nicolson Pavements and Parks—An Interesting Letter.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

CHICAGO, July 15.

After regaling ourselves, we stepped out for a look at the town, ever mindful that we were in Chicago—the city of marriage and divorce, enterprise and sensation; for a thorough Chicagoan is fond of startling news; and the editors of daily papers are ready to serve him—no matter whether it be true or not, so that it is exciting, it pleases him. We had not gone far before we were reminded that Chicago has more than any city in the country. There are now laid ninety miles of Nicolson and preserved-wood pavement in the city, and we are met on every new street with material for its further extension. We must confess, however, that we were not a little surprised to find more numerous depressions and irregularities in the wood pavements here than in our own beautiful Broadway and Jefferson streets. We noticed that the depressions here, as in our own streets, correspond to the sewerage and drainage pipes recently laid down. Chicagoans are not as particular as we are in regard to these trifling irregularities, they do not relay over them; but are satisfied that it is the best and most durable pavement, and they are determined to have it over the entire city in the least possible time.

THE CHURCHES.

How Chicago has acquired any other than a moral reputation is difficult to account for, unless it be as the wicked man who lived a sinner's life under the "droppings of the sanctuary," for in point of numbers and elegance of its churches, Chicago surpasses cities of its size.

Our attention was attracted to a massive edifice of stone. From a niche in the wall flowed a stream of crystal water to refresh the passer-by. The rich and the poor both drink freely from this fountain, over which is a proper inscription. But for its size we were constrained to think it was

"The little church around the corner,
So full of charity and love."

Next we visited an establishment for

PRESERVING WOOD.

The lumber used in street-building is run from the ship into a set of saws, which set alone shapes 75,000 feet of lumber in a day. These blocks are then packed into an immense iron cylinder; the bulk-head is then bolted on, the air exhausted, and, by ingenious machinery, the wood is made to take up a saturated solution of sulphate of iron and lime. Some of the blocks which had been subjected to this process were examined and found to be well saturated by the preserving fluid. These are laid without tar upon the streets.

Louisville has its great Ohio bridge, and Chicago has her which for time, expense and labor may be subjected to comparison. Two of these tunnels are now completed, and we drove through them, we must confess, with a little sepulchral feeling. The subterranean portion of the tube is of brick and stone masonry, but under the river lofty arches of stone support the roof, also of stone. By the gas lights which are constantly burning, we see the water and gas-pipes for the city. The road-way is divided into two portions, and here, at least, drivers obey the ordinance. "To the right as the law directs." Driving upon we see the palatial residences of the "cream de la cream" of Chicago—men who have become rich by judicious investment or more direct speculation—and just here I must mention, for the benefit of those who are buying real estate in Louisville, a single instance of speculation. In our drive this morning we passed a lot of ground in the heart of Chicago, entirely vacant. Upon inquiry we learned that it was one of the very few pieces of property which was still held by its original owner. It was entered, in the year 1835, by its present owner, at $1 25 per acre, and now commands $25,000 per acre, so that $6 25 invested in five acres of ground 36 years ago will bring, at any moment to-day, $125,000. Far on we see the inevitable Nicolson pavement, extending to the Boulevards, lined by shade-trees and flowers, and leading to a contemplated park away from the city.

WABASH AND MICHIGAN AVENUES,

This evening we visited

THE PARKS.

If there is anything which a Louisvillian can appreciate, away from home, it is a park. We have not time in this hasty letter to more than mention the beautiful drive by the lake, the crib, and other features which are attractions in this city, but the walks and shades, the rare flowers, miniature lakes, rustic bridges and sparkling fountains of Lincoln and Union Parks will long live in our memory like visions of fairyland. LOUISVILLIANS ABROAD.

A SUBTERRANEAN HELL.

The City of Sheffield, England, in Danger from a Raging Fire Underneath It.

[From the Sheffield Telegraph.]

One of the most remarkable fires which has ever broken out in Sheffield is now raging underneath property of considerable value almost in the center of the town. The scene of this singular occurrence is Trinity Works, Eyre street, in the occupation of Messrs. Andrews Brothers, who carry on business as cutlery manufacturers and merchants, under the title of Messrs. Butler & Co. They let off a large portion of the premises to other persons in the cutlery trade, and to Mr. Wilson, a glass-grinder; also supplying their tenants with steam power. In connection with the engine is an immense boiler, thirty feet in length. For some time past the boiler has been observed to be gradually sinking, but this has not gone on to so serious an extent as to warrant a careful investigation. The cause of the subsidence, however, was discovered early on Monday morning in a most singular manner. Mr. Bolden, the engineer in charge of the machinery, raked his fires as usual on Saturday evening, but on examining the boilers some time afterward he found, to his astonishment, that the withdrawal of the burning fuel had not had the usual results. The boiler was full of steam. Mr. Mastin, builder, was sent for, and the result of an examination made by him and others was that a layer of shale in connection with a seam of coal extending beneath the works and passing immediately below the boiler was found to be on fire. A number of men were at once set to work to remove the burning material, but it was found that the fire was not confined to that particular spot. There was every reason to believe that it extended a considerable way on each side, and to subdue it excavations of a very extensive character—not only below the boiler, but underneath or near the foundations of the manufactory—would have to be commenced. The excavators, at 12 o'clock on Thursday night, were engaged in the cellar below that portion of the building rented by Mr. Wilson, and the result of their labor was that a quantity of burning shale was removed. The seam of coal and shale extends beyond the works, passing underneath an adjoining dwelling-house occupied by Mr. Holden, the engineer, and to the cottages on the opposite side of Eyre street, the inhabitants of which state that they have observed a peculiar exhalation from their cellars. On Thursday morning, the services of Superintendent Pond, of the corporation fire brigade, were called into requisition, and he proceeded to the spot with a hand engine, which, however, could not be used to any purpose. The fire can only be overcome by means of the spade. The removal of so large a quantity of earth beneath the boiler shed and the manufactory must necessarily be attended with considerable risk and danger, great care having to be taken not to leave the building without sufficient support. To prevent the possibility of an accident of this kind, walls of brick are being erected in suitable places to uphold the great weight which must have rested upon the earth, shale and coal which have been dug out. A gang of men have been employed at the work night and day since Monday. The origin of the fire is at present a mystery. It must have been raging for a long period, possibly for some years. The boiler, of course, cannot be used, and the operations of the manufactory, at which about four hundred men are employed, have consequently been brought to a stand-still.

☞In the French National Assembly it has been resolved by a commission of forty-five Deputies on Army Reform to abolish conscription and adopt the Prussian military system. Under this system every citizen, no matter what his standing or position, must serve in the ranks for a term of three years; after this first period he will be called out one month in the year, as belonging to the first reserve, and when this second period shall have terminated, he is for five years liable to be summoned in case of a war, to do duty in one of the garrisons of France. There will be no exception whatever, and no buying of substitutes will be allowed.

☞Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, in a recent conversation said he concurred fully in the words of advice given by Archbishop McCloskey to the Catholics of New York in regard to the procession, and added that it was easy for the Archbishop to give good advice, which he was powerless to enforce. As to the right of the Orangemen to march in procession through the streets, he said there could be no question in this country. The right to do so was undoubted. The course taken by Mayor Hall and Superintendent of Police Kelso he regarded as very indiscreet. "Oh, the poor Irish," he said, "they are all flurry and hurry, but I take notice that somebody else does the shooting, and it is they that get shot."

☞The writer of an article in the Saturday Review argues that pure, clear water is not always the healthiest, but that muddy water, although unpleasant to the eye and to the palate, is much more beneficial to the health. In illustration of this argument the writer states that in Glasgow, Scotland, where the inhabitants are supplied with pure, clear water from Loch Katrine, the death rate is exceptionally high. The case is also cited of Manchester, England, which had pure soft water, and yet is more sickly than Birmingham, which until recently was supplied from a small muddy stream running through the town.

LONGFELLOW'S LAST.

Full Accounts of the Triumph of Kentucky's Great Racer at Saratoga.

TERRIFIC RUNNING.

[New York Tribune Report.]

The morning of the momentous Cup day broke most auspiciously, but just about mid-day, when the races began, the bright warm sun became obscured by clouds, and just as the first race was over, and the bugle had summoned the horses for the great race of the day and meeting, a slight shower fell, but, fortunately, cleared off almost instantly. The attendance was both large and fashionable, attracted by the fame of the fleet contestants in the Cup race, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Since Boston and Fashion ran their celebrated race on the Fashion Course, no turf contest has caused so much excitement as the meeting between Longfellow and Kingfisher in the Cup to-day. The wonderful exhibition of speed which the Kentucky horse had shown at Long Branch had convinced the public that the Western men had good grounds for their assertions that Longfellow was the best race-horse that the blue grass region of Kentucky had ever produced; but the impression prevailed among a large portion of the community that in Mr. Belmont's great horse Kingfisher he would find a rival worthy of his fame and reputation, and a victory over whom would forever establish his renown in racing annals. The race is now decided. Longfellow has won, and the triumph of Kentucky is complete. The victory is decisive, and Longfellow has gained imperishable fame by his mighty achievement of running the first mile of the race in the unparalleled time of 1:40, or three seconds faster than was ever recorded before.

THE SARATOGA CUP.

For months past, in turf circles, this race has been anticipated with the greatest interest, in consequence of the expected meeting of the great Western racer, Longfellow, and the equine champion of the Eastern turf, Kingfisher. The betting between the two has been enormously heavy, and in the majority of instances at even. After Mr. Sanford's four-year old colt Preakness won the Westchester Cup, it was thought that he would prove a dangerous rival to both the "cracks," for he had beaten Helmbold and Glenelg with apparent ease. But his decisive defeat by Longfellow at Long Branch, in the Monmouth Cup extinguished his chance, although it must be stated that he was far from being up to the mark in point of condition in that race. His withdrawal left the race to the two Eastern and Western champions. The defeat of Finesse and By-the-Sea on the first day of the meeting shook the confidence of the partisans of the Belmont stables, and the night before the race the odds on Longfellow increased from $1,000 to $600, to $1,000 to $400, at which rate Dr. Underwood sold a few pools; but there was not much money invested, as the Kingfisher party were far from anxious to take these odds, and the turf speculators followed suit. On the course, this morning, not a blow was struck until the horses were saddled, and then the betting commenced in earnest. Odds of $1,000 to $500 were offered and taken, and, in several instances, $1,000 to $400 was laid on Longfellow's winning. The Kingfisher division did not bet much. The start was from the three-quarter pole, and was effected without any delay. Longfellow took the lead, and made the running at a terrific pace. As they came up the stretch and swept under the string, Longfellow was two lengths ahead; the first quarter being run in 24½ seconds. Around the turn past the quarter pole (the second quarter being run in 25 seconds) along the back and lower stretches to the starting point, Longfellow continued his flying career with the gap of two clear lengths still open, the first mile being run in the unparalleled time of one minute and forty seconds, according to the official timer, H. P. McGrath, Esq., of Kentucky. This is the fastest time on record, and affords conclusive evidence of the wonderful speed of Mr. Harper's horse. Passing under the string the second time (one mile and a quarter), Longfellow had increased his lead to four clear lengths, which he held around the upper turn, and then, drawing further away from his rival, led him six lengths at the quarter-pole. Along the back-stretch, despite Kingfisher's efforts, he opened a gap of eight lengths, but his rider, Bobby Swim, then took a pull at him, and at the half-mile pole four lengths separated them. On the lower side he let out another reef of speed, and at the starting point, having traversed two miles of the distance, he was six lengths ahead. Coming up the home-stretch on the last quarter, his rider eased him a little and he slackened his pace perceptibly, but being roused with the spur he gallantly responded and galloped home an easy winner, with his jockey looking back triumphantly over his shoulder, by three clear lengths, in 4:02¾. The time is not equal to Kentucky's famous record in the same race and over the same course (4:01¼), but the track to-day was not in such good condition as on that occasion, nor did Kentucky run the first mile at such a terrific rate as did Longfellow to-day. Mr. Harper was overwhelmed with congratulations on his signal victory, and the countenance of the venerable Kentucky turfsman was expressive of delight and satisfaction at the glorious performance of his horse. He declared, after the race, that no money could purchase him, but that he would next season be put to the stud, to reproduce racers like himself in the Bluegrass region.

SUMMARY.

SECOND RACE.—The Saratoga Cup; for all ages; $50 entrance, p. p.; $1,000 added; 2¼ miles.

John Harper's br. h. Longfellow, 4 years, by Leamington, dam Nantura, by Brawner's Eclipse, 108 pounds (Swim) 1

August Belmont's b. c. Kingfisher, 4 years, by Lexington, dam Eltham Lass, 108 pounds (Palmer) 2

Time—4:02¾; first mile run in 1:40.

[The Herald's Three Reports.]

Then came the great event of the day—the contest between Longfellow and Kingfisher, none of the other ten entries for the cup daring to run with them. This race had the appearance of a match between these great celebrities. Since the entries were made, and during the whole of last winter and this spring, discussion has been rife on the merits of these two distinguished racers, and large amounts have from time to time been posted on the issue. Before the appearance of Longfellow at Long Branch the betting between Kingfisher and Longfellow was commonly at even; but when this great Western giant defeated Preakness and Helmbold in such hollow style at Monmouth Park, odds began to be asked by the friends of Kingfisher. One hundred to eighty was given, and in some instances more; but when Lyttelton and Express (both belonging to Mr. Harper, the owner of Longfellow), were beaten by second-class horses, fears were expressed that the stable was amiss, and it was thought that Longfellow himself might not be up to the mark when taken to Saratoga. Thus the betting in favor of Kingfisher again advanced. Mr. Belmont's Finesse and By-the-Sea ran here, and as they were palpably out of condition, fears again arose in the minds of the speculators about Kingfisher. When the crowds, however, reached here and were satisfied that both horses were up to the mark, and were in the finest possible condition, one hundred to seventy became the current odds on the race. As the time approached for the contest, however, the backers of Kingfisher did not seem as anxious to get on their favorite at the previous odds. They asked two to one and were accommodated, and this in face of the rumors of Kingfisher's trial of two miles with his shoes on in 3:34, which experienced turfmen acknowledged was equal to 3:30 with plates. This morning 1,000 to 500 was wagered on Longfellow by a Kentucky gentleman, and two to one became current all over town. There was more of this offered than taken, and greater odds were demanded. Finally ten to four became current, and this state of the odds continued until the bugle sounded for the horses to be saddled. The Western men were determined to have their money on the favorite at any price, and in many instances 100 to 30 were laid on their favorite. Both horses when stripped showed the great care that had been given them by their respective trainers, and they were faultless in point of condition. They were greatly admired by their respective backers, and as they took their preliminary gallops all eyes were riveted on their movements. Two finer looking specimens of the equine race were never presented to the public view nor appeared on a race-track to contend for fame. The race being two miles and a quarter, the horses were started from the three-quarter pole, at the head of the home stretch. As they moved down there all eyes were turned in that direction, and when the flag fell for the start a breathless stillness pervaded the course for seconds. Longfellow at once dashed to the lead and cut out the work, that being the order of Mr. Harper to his jockey. As Longfellow came up and passed in front of the grand stand it was very plain that he had a higher degree of speed than his opponent, and he seemed to be running well within himself, while Kingfisher was evidently laboring to keep up with him. Longfellow, when he reached the three-quarter pole—the starting place—had made the mile in the wonderful time of 1:40, by three seconds the fastest mile ever run in America, and this was done with the greatest apparent ease. He was timed from the judges' stand a mile, and this he performed in 1:42. The two miles from the starting point were run in 3:33, and he galloped the last quarter of a mile of the race with his jockey's head turned all the way looking back at Kingfisher's movements. Longfellow's victory over Kingfisher stamps him the fastest horse that America ever produced, and if he is now retired from the race-course, he will be a fortune to his owner for stud purposes. The time made, however, in this race—4:02¾—is not as fast as that made by Kentucky on this course some years since, by a second and a half; but there is no doubt that had Longfellow been pressed the last mile of the race, he could have beaten Kentucky's time several seconds. It was a grand race, and will long be remembered by all who witnessed it.

THE SARATOGA CUP—LONGFELLOW VS. KINGFISHER.

Old Joseph Harper's chestnut-faced darky brought the master-piece of horseflesh, Longfellow, out of his stable and walked him around in front of the Grand Stand, and in a moment was surrounded by scores, who praised and cheered his magnificent appearance.

Then followed Belmont's Kingfisher, with an ace of spades Ethiopian on his back, and the rivals were together for an instant. Now there came a lull in the babbling half of the immense crowd, and the faint murmurs of many voices died away over the fields in a whisper which struck the opposite buildings and ripped the foliage like an April gush of wind. There was a short quiet, however, while many a Longfellow man's heart fluttered in his bosom and every Longfellow girl blushed to the temples. The white and red flags of the inner field waved softly in the south breeze wafting across it. Hush! The bugle calls the jockeys to mount, and Bobby Swim, in his orange and red, leaps on the noble Longfellow's back, and Billy Palmer, in maroon and red, did likewise to Kingfisher. They gallop up and down a moment and proceed to the head of the stretch preparatory to taking positions for the start, and then are hailed with loud acclaim. Then there is another short wait, and necks are craned to see the starting flag in the hands of genial Wheatly ready to drop in the horses' faces. I know what excitement there is, for fair ones and their rougher companions are murmuring aloud, "Longfellow!" "Longfellow!" "O Longfellow!" I never saw such enthusiasm as was displayed by the friends of orange and red. "By jiminy cricket!" cried a pious man, "they are off! They are off, sure as you live!" And off they had gone like an arrow from a bow or the whiz of a rifle bullet.

Now, Kingfisher, good animal, strain your sinews, for this may be the hardest race ever known for you; and Longfellow, do your best, for thousands of bright eyes are beaming on you, and thousands of soft cheeks are glowing with pleasurable pride as your hoofs strike the ground. Yes, there she is, on one of the upper seats, more rosy than a pink-tipped shell, my Tammany beauty of yesterday, taking all hearts by her delicious smiles and the glances of her playful eyes, waving her tiny hand at Longfellow. She is happy to-day, as her favorite will win.

"Longfellow's ahead!" "Longfellow's ahead!" cry a thousand throats, and sure enough the noble brown is ahead at the end of the first quarter; and away he forges, his limbs working like the piston-rods of an engine, and the ground seems to quiver as he strikes it. "Do you see that noble, splendid stride?" "Oh, what a nice stride!" cries Ansell, the colored trainer of General Buford, to me, as they pass by the stand for the first time. "How much's that mile?" "Why, 1:40," say the judges. "Great ——." "Ho!" Longfellow now begins to show his speed, and the jockey his skill in the way he pulls ahead of Kingfisher, who never ceases his work. But, alas! for him, Longfellow is going over the ground many more feet every lick than he, and it's only child's play. "Bravo! bravo! Bobby Swim," shouts a massive Kentuckian, and half a dozen men of like elk embrace each other in the wildest frenzy, while the girls wave their handkerchiefs and actually cry aloud.

"Oh! oh! oh! this is the biggest thing I ever saw," shouts another strapping, big-framed Southerner. Sixteen more friends of the orange and red now embrace, and even pound each other in sheer joy. "Say, Palmer, why the devil don't you hit him up!" "Hit him up!" cry the sullen Kingfisher men. "Never mind," says a Longfellow man; "Old Harper is doing all the hitting up to-day." "Yes, from eend to eend," shouts another. And it looks like it. The home-stretch has been reached, and the battle is almost lost and won now. The friends of Longfellow are uproarious, and shout and caper, and offer 100 to 10, 100 to 8, and feel chagrined that they cannot get another cent on the race. A few seconds more elapse, and the heads of the horses are at the nearest distance stand. I can just see the jockey of Kingfisher, and he looks as if he wanted to die on that animal's back. It is no use to whip him, to cut him, Palmer; you are beaten badly; Bobby Swim has you in his toils, and Longfellow goes along as easily as if the victory was already won, and the cheers of his sympathizers drown every other noise.

The horses pass the judges' stand like the bolt of a cannon-ball, Longfellow leading with ease five lengths, and the grand stand rages and boils and surges to and fro like a convulsed sea. A second or two more and the horses walk back, the jockeys dismount, and there is another rending shout. The time is put up—4:02¾—and the Saratoga Cup is won and becomes a thing of the past, to be remembered in all time by Longfellow's partisans and sulked over by defeated friends of Kingfisher.

THE BETTING.

Longfellow	$600	655	700	630	610	570

THE RACE.

The horses had a good start, and Longfellow went to the front at once. As they ran up the home-stretch from the three-quarter pole, which was the starting place, Longfellow opened the gap at every stride, and passed the stand with three lengths of daylight between them. Going around the turn there was little change in the distance between the horses. Longfellow was loping along with his grand, easy stride, at a tremendous rate, while Kingfisher, seemingly at the top of his speed, kept as close as it was possible for him to do. Longfellow showed three lengths of daylight down the back-stretch, and around the lower turn he made the distance between them four lengths. Kingfisher was still being forced at this early state of the race, but he did not shut up any of the gap. As they came into the homestretch Longfellow came away further from Kingfisher, and he passed under the wire five lengths in front. Cries were now heard all over the track, "100 to 20 on Longfellow," with not a response from the backers of Kingfisher. Going into the last mile the big horse let out an additional link, and Kingfisher was being forced to the "top of his bent." There were six lengths of daylight between them at the quarter pole and eight on the stretch, and 100 to 10 went begging. Kingfisher was still urged, and the gallant colt labored with a will to shut up the gap without effect. Longfellow was then taken in hand, and Kingfisher closed a trifle at the half-mile pole; but on the lower turn Longfellow was again given his head, and in an instant eight lengths divided them again. Coming into the homestretch Kingfisher was completely beaten, and Longfellow was taken up and came home easily, winning the race by five or six lengths, making the distance in 4:02¾. Longfellow did not seem to mind the race much, and appeared as if he could have gone a much longer journey. Longfellow was timed the first mile of the dash by competent men, who stated that he ran it in 1:40, three seconds faster than ever a mile was run in this country. Kentucky, in his race here six years ago with Rhinodyne and Captain Moore, beat the time made by Longfellow in this race one second and a quarter, but Longfellow undoubtedly could have beaten that time several seconds had he been pressed by Kingfisher all the way. Longfellow ran the mile from stand to stand in 2:42, and he made the first two miles of the race in 3:33. Is there a horse in England that can beat him?

THE INNOCENT SPECTATOR.

An Individual Who Gets What He Deserves.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The Innocent Spectator has been hurt again. He is always getting in the way when there is a row going on, and if anybody is hurt he is sure to be the sufferer. He don't mean any harm. He is there just to see what is going on, bless his innocent soul, and hasn't the slightest idea of hurting any body, and yet see how he catches it. The real offender escapes, but the poor Innocent Spectator, who hasn't done anything but stand around and look on, wards off policemen's clubs with his head, and offers his body as a target for the avenging bullet.

He complains bitterly about it, if he be not past complaining altogether; his friends declare it is an outrage, and the entire press cry out, "Too bad." If he had been doing anything, now, more than looking on; if he had aided and abetted, if he had expressed his sentiments on either side, the case would have been different; but he was only an innocent spectator, curious to see what was going on, which renders his case a very deplorable one indeed.

A sad fatality attends the Innocent Spectator, somehow. For instance, there is a row in a saloon he is passing. It don't concern him at all, but he thinks he will just step in and see what is going on. He enters the door just in time to stop a beer-mug, or some more deadly projectile, with his head, and next morning a local paragraph concerning the row informs us "no one was hurt except an innocent spectator."

Again: Two men are engaged in an altercation on the street. Innocent Spectator happens along, and stops to hear what it is all about. Pistols are drawn. One of the belligerents jumps behind Innocent Spectator and fires upon his antagonist. Antagonist returns the fire, and Innocent Spectator falls, shot through the vitals. It is a very hard case, to be sure, but that is always the way with him.

Last Wednesday there was a fearful riot in New York. The riot had been anticipated for a long time. Press and people were united in a fear amounting almost to a certainty that bloody scenes would be enacted on the streets that day. Immense preparations were made, military and otherwise, to suppress the riot, should it be commenced, and punish the rioters.

Innocent Spectator couldn't keep away, of course not; he never can. He left his work, his business, whatever it was, and went to look on. He saw all the worst elements of a mob congregated in vast numbers, awaiting a favorable moment to begin the attack. He saw, also, hundreds of resolute and determined policemen, armed with clubs and revolvers, and thousands of soldiers not to be trifled with, whose muskets were known to be shotted, ready to repel assault in the most vigorous and effective manner. And yet he takes a position to see the show as though it was to be one of the most peaceful of pageants. He gets the best place he can find—takes a front seat as it were—this guileless, unsuspecting creature, where he won't miss any of it, and he don't. The anticipated collision comes. The street resounds with the volleys of the soldiery, and Innocent Spectator has the top of his head blown off, or is desperately wounded. "That is always the way," is the newspaper comment, "it is the poor innocent spectator who suffers."

Now why couldn't the Innocent Spectator keep away, knowing the danger? He had no business there. Had it not been for the spectators, innocent as to their intention, who thronged the streets, there would have been no riot. With none there but men who meant mischief, the problem could easily have been solved, but the crowd formed the bulwark behind which the cowardly rioters fired upon the procession, and among whom they skulked away from recognition.

A ruffian fires and kills a National Guard and then is "lost in the crowd." Crowd of what? Why of those same innocent spectators who should have kept away. So the Innocent Spectator is not so very innocent after all, and if he suffers in common with ruffians and rioters it is through his own folly. In a general way the Innocent Spectator gets vastly more sympathy than he is entitled to.

☞The Fort Scott (Kansas) Democrat is "informed of a most brutal affair which took place in Linn county a few days ago. A young lady about seventeen years of age, the daughter of a minister living near Mound City, has for some time been keeping company with a young man in the neighborhood, who, though poor, is of a good family and highly esteemed by all of his acquaintances. The father had charged the daughter to have nothing to do with the young man, but she, contrary to his orders, met her lover whenever an opportunity offered. Her father, learning of this, took her into a room and, after locking the door, beat her until she fell in convulsions at his feet. He then made an attempt to resuscitate her, but without success, and left her for dead. The minister then fled to Mound City to procure legal advice, and remained concealed for a day, after which he fled to parts unknown. The daughter is slowly recovering. Should the father return it will not be a very healthy locality for him."

A REMARKABLE WOMAN.

Leaves From the Private Life of Mrs. Wharton, the Baltimore Borgia.

STARTLING ECCENTRICITIES.

[From the Philadelphia Telegraph.]

For women this is certainly the age of promise and prominence. We find them on every hand leaving the hearthstone and storming the intrenched positions of male humanity. They have carried the rostrum and pulpit by force, and are now thundering at the portals of the franchise.

But in a graver and decidedly a tragic sense we find them latterly entering into competition with man. We allude to the simoon or tidal wave of murder that has but lately swept across our continent, and has left at this very moment three prominent women, with blood upon their hands, stranded upon the beach of justice. We allude of course to Mrs. Laura D. Fair, the California murderess, Mrs. Lydia Sherman, the Birmingham Borgia, and Mrs. Major Harry W. Wharton, who is the latest sensation of the day in connection with the great Baltimore poisoning case.

We do not purpose to rewrite for the readers of the Telegraph the circumstances of the crime on the charge of the commission of which Mrs. Wharton stands arraigned. They are now extensively known, and the retelling of the story would be but a tedious lengthening of our article. But our sole purpose is to lay before the public some facts that are not known—facts culled by laborious search in private avenues of information, and, which combined, contain to a certain extent the private life of Mrs Wharton, and throw a great light upon what will most necessarily be her only ground of defense.

Ellen G. Nugent was born in this city about forty-five years ago. Her father, George Nugent, was a most prominent and successful merchant of the day, doing a large importing business of fine goods, silks, etc. In character he was strictly upright and honorable, living, as it were, by a set rule of firmness and justice to all. His daughter, Ellen, was by his second wife, he having been previously married to a Cuban woman, by whom he had two children, both boys, one of whom is now a respectable and prosperous member of our community. There were six other children by the second wife, four sons and two daughters. Both of the daughters are married and living in the city.

It is somewhat difficult to ascertain who Ellen's mother was, speaking in a family sense. She appears to have been a very beautiful, and at the same time a very obscure girl, living here in Philadelphia. But as it is not particularly with Mrs. Nugent or the other children that we have to do, it does not matter much; but we will remark, en passant, that Mrs. Nugent has only been dead a few years, having outlived her husband, who died about the time of the great California gold excitement.

And now having cleared the loom of our story of cross-threads, we will proceed to weave the narrative of Mrs. Wharton's life, whose most exciting scene has just taken place in Eutaw street, Baltimore.

Mr. Nugent did not remain long in Philadelphia after the birth of his daughter Ellen, or Nellie. He had been very successful in business, and finally concluded to retire, which he did, purchasing a lovely place about a mile this side of Conshocken, at a spot called Gulf Mills, where, with his family growing up around him, he settled down to pass the closing hours of his life, amid the sylvan scenery of our beautiful Schuylkill's banks.

Of all the children, his daughter Nellie was his idol. He lavished every attention upon her that money could command. Especial pains were taken with her education, and she spent a considerable time at Bishop Doane's seminary, in Burlington, New Jersey. And now the real interest of our story commences. Nellie has grown up under our pencil into beautiful womanhood, and her mature character is beginning to determine itself. The scene is in the Gulf Mills House, and the time is about twenty-five years ago.

By the universal voice of those who knew her at this time, she was certainly a most lovely girl. About twenty years of age, of slender and graceful, yet queenly bearing, with magnificent jet-black hair of unusual length, dark eyes, and fair complexion—such was her physical beauty. But those who knew her well say that that was the least of her attractions. It was rather her engaging manner, her winning ways, her dashing, inspiring disposition that bound captive at the chariot wheel of Cupid so many of her male acquaintances.

It was about this time that she began to develop a passion that has ever since been inordinate with her, and that was the desire to dress magnificently. Her father spared no expense to gratify her slightest whim, and gave her money enough to clothe a duchess. As a consequence, there was no more regular attendant at the then fashionable bazars of our city than Miss Nugent, whose carriage got to be familiarly known, no doubt, to the salesmen within.

As we have said, her father allowed her to carry the purse of a duchess, and consequently the reader can judge of his surprise when outside bills that had been contracted by his daughter to the amount of thousands of dollars were sent into him for settlement, and all this heavy running into debt had taken place in a comparatively short time, and without the slightest premonitory intelligence.

Where had the money gone? Hardly upon herself, since, although always elegantly attired, in obedience to Fashion's latest mandate, this debt excess was too absurdly large to be answered for on the ground of personal expenditure. But a little investigation showed. It was found that this money had been expended for laces, silks, jewelry, etc., which were lavished with an imperial hand as presents upon her young friends.

This was certainly a little eccentric, and quite enough to cause the eyebrow to raise. Beautiful young ladies do not generally run their fathers into debt simply to give away indiscriminately costly gifts. But something more strange was yet to come. The debts were paid by the father, and the current of events drifted along towards the most remarkable feature of this remarkable woman's life.

As we have intimated, and as may naturally be supposed, Miss Nellie was the brilliant center of a large circle of people of the best class in that vicinity. So that when, shortly after, each and all of them received an invitation to the marriage of that young lady, you may be sure it created some little stir of excitement. In the first place, it was so entirely unexpected that it almost took away the people's breath; and secondly, what caused the most surprise was, that the happy man had not been selected from the large number of country gallants of wealth and position who constantly surrounded her, but was a Mr. Williamson, of the city, who was but a casual visitor, and whose matrimonial attentions had not been suspected in the least. It appears, also, that he had been so indiscreet and impolite as not even to have spoken to Mr. Nugent about it, and knowing the character of that old-time gentleman, we are somewhat surprised that the marriage was allowed to go on, did we not also know that whatever his daughter Nellie had set her heart upon accomplishing she could most certainly do, especially where the father's consent was only to be gained.

Well, at length the auspicious hour rolled round, and all the invited guests assembled at the Nugent mansion to witness the marriage of the beauty. Great preparations had been made for the event. Mr. Nugent was determined that the daughter who was queen of his heart should be mated in a regal manner. Never had the young girl looked so lovely, as did the bride, seated in her satin and lace, with her attendant maids about her, and waiting, with the love-light in her eyes, for the happy groom. It was now nearly the hour for the ceremony, and still he had not come. "Where is Mr. Williamson?" and, "Why don't he come?" were now frequently asked by those who were present. The hour at which the nuptial knot was to have been tied struck with a dismal clang, and yet no bridegroom. The minister was there with the book and gown, the guests were there, the beautiful bride was there, and everything was waiting for the appearance of the tardy gentleman from the city. The father's brow began to darken, and the bride's cheeks to turn pale. Another dismal hour wore away, and its death-knell was tolled by the clock, and still no groom. Another hour, and still no groom. "Possibly he may have met with an accident; let messengers be sent." And the messengers were sent in haste, while the guests sat in silence, and the bride, now thoroughly convinced that her lover was false, raved and sobbed like one mad. The minutes flew away on wings of lead until the messengers returned, who, instead of bringing with them Mr. Williamson, or announcing at once some reasonable cause for his non-appearance, beckoned the father mysteriously apart, and whispered in his ear. The news could not be kept secret, and in a moment it was known. Mr. Williamson had not contracted the marriage, and knew nothing about it. Slowly and sadly, as if from a funeral, the guests departed, glancing askantly at the bride, who sat weeping before them, and shaking their heads significantly.

This was certainly the maddest freak that it is possible for a young lady to commit, and the incident reads like a chapter from Mrs. Southworth. Subsequent investigation showed conclusively that the marriage had not the slightest foundation, so far as any intention of Mr. Williamson was concerned, and, taking this fact into consideration, it is not strange that people now began to speak mysteriously about the young lady, and to intimate forcibly that something was wrong in her head. This bitter suspicion began now to shape itself into the solemnity of a fact in the mind of Mr. Nugent, and, after careful pondering of the matter, it was resolved to have Nellie removed to an asylum for the insane.

As a key to subsequent events, it is to be presumed that she knew the intentions of her family at the time. It wanted but a day or two of the execution of the asylum project, when one morning it was found that the beautiful bird had flown in the night from the paternal nest. But in a very little while the father received intelligence that his daughter had eloped with young Lieutenant Harry W. Wharton, had proceeded with him to Philadelphia, had been there married, and that now, as Mrs. Harry W. Wharton, they were living at Jones' Hotel, in Chestnut street, above Sixth, just where the German Democrat office now stands.

This was almost as strange and unaccountable a movement as the burlesque marriage, and caused a great deal of comment. Although of acquaintance there had been considerable between the parties, of courtship there had been little or none, and, furthermore, at the time of the elopement and marriage the young lieutenant knew full well that his lovely bride was intended by her friends for a temporary seclusion in a mad-house.

But the runaway couple had not been long from home until they received assurances of forgiveness, and returned to the house at Gulf Mills. They also for a time lived at Norristown, and in Philadelphia again. It wasn't long after marriage until Mrs. Wharton was in financial difficulties again, which were again settled by her indulgent father.

After this, her husband, who was captain now, was stationed at Fort Kearney for some five or seven years. Mrs. Wharton accompanied him, as indeed she did in all his wanderings, even down into Texas with him on one occasion. But while out upon the plains the eyesight of the captain had become defective, and he and his wife returned to Philadelphia again. They put up at Glass & Co.'s Hotel, on Chestnut street, during such time as the captain was under the hands of an oculist.

At the breaking out of the war the captain got a commission in a Delaware regiment, and eventually was appointed general disbursing agent, having his headquarters in Eutaw street, Baltimore, right near his house in "Hamilton Place." With the exception of a short time they lived in Washington, this was his home up to his mysterious death in 1867.

Such are some of the salient points and bold outlines in the career of this most remarkable woman. Notwithstanding the growing suspicion that she also poisoned her husband and son, it is the universal testimony that never was there a more loving wife. She was most passionately devoted to him, and followed him everywhere. We have also seen that money was her great weakness. She was nearly always in difficulties of this kind, and would borrow from any one. This is, of course, to be accounted for in a great measure by her inordinate passion for dress. Wherever she went she was bound to move in the most fashionable circles, which she invariably adorned by her beauty and engaging deportment.

We do not purpose, as we said at the start, to touch upon the particulars of this most remarkable case. Mrs. Wharton now stands before the bar of justice, charged with murder and attempted murder, and it seems to be the general opinion that three or four more items will be added to the crimson list, two of them the murder of husband and son. The facts the public are already familiar with; the theory that will embrace every case can never be arrived at. The whole story only goes to show that, keen as has been the scrutiny of human character these thousand of years, it still has unsounded depths and undiscovered latitudes. And this Monumental City tragedy, whose central figure is an elegant lady of the first circles of society, only adds another enigma to the lengthy list that our poets, philosophers and scientists are called upon to solve.

☞Recently ex-Emperor Napoleon, during a visit to London, dropped in at his old club, the Army and Navy, the smoking and billiard-rooms of which he knew so well in 1848, and had a chop in the coffee-room like an ordinary member. He then went to the international exhibition, and when the inventor of a new type-setting machine printed a card for him—"The Emperor of the French"—he thanked him with a laugh, and added, "You forget the Ex."

☞The Hon. Mrs. Yelverton, or "Lady Avonmore," as she is now called, is at present residing at a beautiful place called Saucelito, some ten miles from San Francisco. She is busily engaged in writing her American experiences, and will shortly depart for the Sandwich Islands, Japan and China.

WRIGHT & CO.—BY MAIL.

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 16.—Since our respects of the 25th ult. the receipts from the interior have continued moderate—averaging between 5,000 and 5,500 bags per day—as the planters, looking to their very small new crop, show little disposition to part with their coffees at the prices now ruling; and yet these prices, low as they may be to the planter, are high to the exporters, because of a false and fictitious exchange, sustained at a point at least 20 per cent. above what it should be. Our stock is estimated to be about 180,000 bags. Total sales since our last foot up 130,100 bags, of which 36,600 bags were for the United States, 87,900 bags for Europe, and 5,600 bags for elsewhere. Stock 130,000 bags.

We have advices from Santos to the 15th inst. Considerable activity had prevailed in the coffee market there, the sales since 20th ult. amounting to no less than 54,000 bags, of which 12,500 bags were for the United States and 41,500 bags for Europe; prices for lots had ranged from 5$400 to 5$650 ℔ arroba. Receipts were averaging about 2,000 bags per day, and the stock was 15,000 to 16,000 bags.

FREIGHTS.—There has been rather more inquiry for ready vessels, for which full rates have been paid, but our harbor holds a better supply of shipping than at date of our last.

BALTIMORE FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 13.

Owing to the firmness of holders, who decline selling at current quotations, sales are restricted. We have only to report, since close of last week's review, 2,207 bags Rio, ex Prestissimo; 5,900 do ex Monarch, and 500 do ex Cricket; also, from second hands, 1,000 bags in lots at 14½c to 16c, gold. We quote the range as follows: For cargoes of Rio, ordinary, 10¾@10½c; do fair, 10¾@11c; do good, 11¼@11½c; do prime, 12@12½c, gold, in bond, sixty days. Job lots Rio, ordinary, 13½@13¾c; do fair, 14@14½c; do good, 14½@14¾c; prime, 15@15½c; choice to fancy, 16@16½c; gold, duty paid, sixty days. Imports this week 9,400 bags, and since 1st January 326,642. Stock to-day 67,493 bags; at New York, 107,035 bags, and at all the Southern ports, 31,752 bags. Total stock in importers' hands, 206,280 bags.—[Baltimore Sun.

New York Tobacco Market.

Tobacco has been active for Kentucky at some further improvement in prices, especially in the low grades. The sales for the week amount to the large aggregate of 1,700 hhds, about equally divided between shippers and home dealers and cutters. Prices are quoted at 6¼@7c for lugs, and 7½@12c for common to fine leaf. Seed leaf remains quiet; buyers and sellers are wide apart in their views, and it is unquestionably true that we are much too high to permit shipments. The only transactions have been jobbing parcels of old wrappers at 35@55c. Havana tobacco quiet; sales 300 bales at 85@$1 10. Manufactured tobacco dull.—[Financial Chronicle, 15th.

San Francisco Wool Market.

We extract the following from James Hartley & Co.'s Wool Circular, dated San Francisco, California, July 1, 1871:

The California spring wool clip having now passed from the farmers into the hands of the manufacturers and dealers—principally the former—we venture a review of the market. The spring clip was heralded in under very auspicious circumstances. Many Eastern houses having sent buyers into our market, created, at the very outset, a good competitive demand, and caused sellers to hold at very firm prices; indeed, at such figures as it was believed at the time could not be maintained during the season. But in this very many were mistaken. Like the steady flowing of the tide, prices kept advancing; having opened at 22c to 26½c, and closed firm at 28c to 35c. The market only once felt a lull from a state of feverish excitement, and then only to have it renewed with greater force. We do not mean to examine into the causes, but merely look at the effect produced by the eagerness of buyers to supply their wants.

The receipts show the California spring wool clip, received up to the 1st instant, to be about 12,000,000 pounds. Of this not quite 2,000,000 pounds have been retained by the manufacturers on this coast, the balance having gone East.

Spices.

The entire movement in a wholesale way on the leading grades in this market has, apparently, had for its objective point the concentration and control of the remaining stocks available, and the manipulations of one set of operators to get all they could for their goods, and of the other set to pay as little as possible, have kept business generally in an uncertain and feverish condition. The tendency of values, however, has naturally been upward, and occasionally some very extreme prices were asked for desirable parcels. Not only have our own local dealers been engaged, but some stock has been bought up and is now held on Boston account. Advices from the producing countries continue quite stimulating, and, making due allowance for the usual exaggeration, holders, in reality, seem to have a fair basis for their firmness and confidence. Mace, nutmegs and pepper are still the best maintained. The demand for retail parcels is not quick, but very fair, with the distribution, as a rule, made at full market values though frequently on a retail lot a buyer can obtain relatively better terms than if desirous of handling a large line.—[Fin. Chron., 15th.

Westward Freight Rates.

The new freight schedule agreed upon by the New York Central and Hudson river, the Erie, and the Pennsylvania Railroads, shows a considerable reduction as compared with the old schedule. The following are the rates now charged per hundred weight on first-class freights by the lines mentioned:

This reduction is an important, though tardy, concession on the part of the railroad companies to the just demands of the business community of New York.—[New York Bulletin.

Petersburg Tobacco Market.

[Index, 14th.]

The breaks on Wednesday were quite large, and for shipping the market that day was very active, with sales of good to fine at $12@14. For manufacturing descriptions prices were hardly sustained. Yesterday the breaks were not so large, and the general tone of the market was less active, while for the manufacturing grades (particularly good, useful, newly sun-cured fillers) the market was decidedly dull and prices lower. For inferior lugs prices are also lower. We do not expect again to see the breaks so large as they have been for the last two weeks. We quote lugs at $5@6; poor to common $6 50@7 50; for fair to very good short working leaf $7@7 50; common $8@8 50; fair $9@9 50, and good to very good $10@11; black wrappers $10 50@12 50; coal-cured is less active and prices are lower. Good (newly sun-cured) fillers are comparatively low, owing to the fact that our manufacturers are unable to use that kind of tobacco to advantage, the demand being mostly for a low-priced filler. Wherever the land will suit for shipping tobacco, we would advise planters to make that sort. The tax of 32c on manufactured is a great drawback on the manufacturing interest, and to that may be attributed the low price of good fillers, as compared with shipping.

To Tobacco Planters.

The Louisville Tobacco Board of Trade has issued a circular letter to the "Tobacco raisers in Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Illinois." The object of the circular is to encourage the cultivation of "bright cutting leaf" as a better paying crop than the heavy tobacco now so generally raised. The following is an extract from the circular:

The leaf trade in our market has increased steadily, and the largest portion of the Western tobacco crop is now being concentrated at Louisville, where the competition between shippers, manufacturers, and speculators has become very strong. The demand for every class of leaf is always large, and for one particular kind the supplies do not come up to the requirements of our trade. This kind is bright cutting leaf, a tobacco which will always pay the farmers better than almost any other description they can raise. In reviewing the range of tobacco prices for a series of years, we find that light bright cutting leaf has, on an average, been sold from 50 to 100 per cent. higher than any other class of tobacco raised.

In the upper portion of Kentucky, the great advantage of raising bright cutting leaf has years since been well understood; farmers there have made it a specialty, and by careful raising, curing, and handling of this class of tobacco, secured to themselves a much larger reward for their labor than the planters in other portions of Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, and Illinois.

In drawing the attention of farmers to this important fact, we wish to state that the consumption of bright cutting leaf is steadily increasing. Not only do American manufacturers constantly extend their trade, but European markets have begun to take a great deal of bright cutting leaf, and, during the past few years, England, Germany, and Holland have drawn large supplies of this kind from the Louisville market.

This leaf, having once met with great favor in Europe, the demand for it from there is certain to continue and increase; and considering, in connection herewith, the growing consumption of bright cutting leaf in America, we conclude that farmers can raise nothing that possibly could pay better than this class of tobacco.

The production of it is not necessarily confined to those sections where it has been raised so far with great pecuniary success. The climate and soil of large portions of Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Illinois, are as well adapted for the growth of it as the most favorably known Kentucky river district.

The circular then proceeds to give very full suggestions as to the best methods of accomplishing the object in view.

Louisville Live Stock Market.

BOURBON HOUSE STOCK-YARD—VISSMAN, DOWNING & CO., PROPRIETORS.

MONDAY, July 17, 1871.

CATTLE—Nearly four hundred head have been put on the market since our last report, and over two hundred and fifty head were on sale to-day. Most all of them were sold. There were but few good ones on the market. Most of them were of the medium and common grades. Drovers are compelled to sell at very low prices, as the markets at other points are overstocked, and a downward tendency seems to prevail at all points East and West. From appearances there is no telling when the market will reach the bottom. Good, heavy shippers are selling at $4 50 to $5, and good to choice butcher stuff, such as fat cows, heifers and steers, $4 00 to $4 50; second quality at $3 50 to $3 75, and really mean at $2 25 to $3 per 100 the gross.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—The market good for choice heavy old sheep, weighing from 100 to 120 lbs; they sell at $3 00 to $3 50 per 100 the gross. Best heavy lambs sell at $3 00 to $3 50 per head, and mixed lots sell at $1 50 to $2 50 per head, including old sheep.

HOGS—The market remains about the same. All sell about as fast as they come in. Best corn-fed sell at $4 25 to $4 50, and inferior at $3 75 to $4 per 100 lbs gross.

REPORTED BY THE SOUTHERN STOCK-YARD COMPANY.

CATTLE—There have been several cattle changed hands the last three days, market ruling dull, and prices from 25c to 50c per 100 pounds gross lower than last week's quotations. [illegible] they sell it as low down figures. The best No. 1, smooth steers and heifers, 4½ to 4¾c, but few at the last-named price, and when they sell above 4½c they have to be extra; second quality sell at from 3½ to 4c, and for thin, rough cattle 3 to 3c; good No. 1 shipping steers are held at 4½ to 5c.

HOGS—The market for this class of stock rules dull, and prices not quite as good as last quoted. Half-fatted, 200 to 250 pound hogs sell at $3 75@4, and for the best heavy well-fatted $4 50@4 85; a few extra, picked hogs sold at $5.

SHEEP—The market for sheep and lambs rules dull, and prices are drooping. Thin, mixed lots are hard to sell at any price; when they sell they go at from $1 to $2 per head, and for nice, smooth, well-fatted, heavy sheep 3@3½c per pound. Lambs, 50 to 60 pounds average, well-fatted, $1 75@2 25 per head, and for 70 to 80 pounds average, smooth and well-fatted, $2 50.

The Baltimore Sensation.

A gentleman who has been intimate with the WHARTON family for many years tells us that Mrs. WHARTON, the alleged poisoner, is a woman of the most gentle and affectionate disposition. Her love for her husband, who was rather a wild and harum-scarum person, was conspicuous during twenty years of their married life, and she was so devoted to the son, whom she is charged with having murdered, that she sacrificed her own comfort during his entire school days to be near him and to look after his welfare. The NUGENTS, of Philadelphia, like the WHARTONS, are people of the highest order of character and culture. Mrs. WHARTON herself was richly educated, and up to the present time has borne something more than an exceptional reputation for goodness and gentleness of conduct. A more startling and unnatural denouement could not be conceived than that which has thus suddenly come about.

A New Dress.

Those of our readers whose eyes were made to ache because of the bad typography of the COURIER-JOURNAL for the past few months have no doubt heartily thanked us for the bright and handsome appearance it has presented during the last few days. This paper is now presented with the finest and best finished and most perfect founts of type ever used by any paper in the West or South. They were made by Messrs. Farmer, Little & Co., 63 and 65 Beekman street, New York, and were copper-faced by the Newton Company, of the same city. This is the fifth consecutive dress of copper-faced type we have had from the same parties, and this fact is the highest testimony we could offer of our faith in the superior excellence of their work. The COURIER-JOURNAL is one of the only two or three papers in the West and South that is compelled by its very large circulation to use so carefully manufactured and so expensive an outfit. The dress we have just put on cost us within a fraction of five thousand dollars, and our readers may well imagine that it requires a large patronage to enable us to make such frequent and heavy outlays.

THE SUNDAY NIGHT STORM.

Considerable Damage Done the Crops Along the Nashville Railroad—Singular and Serious Accident to a Freight Train.

The storm of Sunday night seems to have been much more severe along the line of the Nashville railroad than in this neighborhood. From Bowling Green to Muldrough's Hill, it did very great damage; corn and grain along the entire line were blown down and much injured, and trees were uprooted and broken off like pipe-stems. So heavy was the storm that all trains both ways were delayed from six to nine hours.

The freight train that left Bowling Green at 7 P. M., coming North, met with a serious accident at Munfordsville. Several freight cars, standing on a switch at that point, were blown, by the force of the wind, along the side-track until the front car ran off at the lower end on to the main track. The night was very dark, and rain was falling heavily at the time, and the engineer on the Northern-bound freight did not see the obstruction until too late. The engine struck the car fairly in the center, and passed directly through, completely demolishing it. Such was the force of the shock that the other cars on the switch were impelled to the other end, driving the rear car on to the main track before the engine on the freight train reached that point. The engineer, seeing his danger, reversed his engine and jumped off, escaping uninjured. The engine struck this car, forcing it and the one immediately in its rear off the track to the right. The engine, tender and front car of the train were thrown down the embankment to the left, totally wrecking the first and badly injuring the other two. Fortunately, no one was hurt.

The passenger train from the South, due here at 6:10 yesterday morning, did not arrive until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The passengers confirm the account of the great damage done to the crops along the line of road. Even in this vicinity the wind blew with great violence. A buggy, coming toward town on the night in question, was lifted completely from the ground by the force of the storm, and only by the greatest exertions was it kept from overturning. The occupants were obliged to take refuge in a neigboring house until the storm had partly spent its force, and upon resuming their journey, were in constant danger from the continuous and alarmingly near flashes of lightning. The display, nevertheless, was a grand one and could never be forgotten.

KUKLUX.

An Oldham County Gentleman Badly Scared.

Mr. Bracket, a farmer living near Brownsboro Station, on the Short Line road, came to the city yesterday to seek protection from the authorities from alleged Kuklux threats. Mr. Bracket says that several weeks ago he received a letter signed K. K. K., ordering him to leave his home or suffer the consequences. A day or two since he received the following communication, which induced his action as above:

BLOODY WOOD, July the 13.

Messrs. Bracket and Briggs:

SIRS—Our orders has bin informed that you have bin keeping a house that is a disgrace to the community in which you live in allowing negroes to visit your house and to be too intiment with your daughters and more than that you are Considered a bad characters. now ten days from the date of this notice you will find your self hanging to a limb of the first tree that we can find. it is a duty that we have obligated ourselves to do and we will do it K. K. K.

Mr. Bracket asserts that the charges contained in this notice are utterly without foundation; that he does not keep such a house as represented, and that the communication was the work of enemies who were opposed to him in politics, he being a Radical. He laid his case before the authorities, and the truth of his statement will doubtless be investigated.

A Trade Wind in Southwestern Louisville.

From a gentleman in this city we learn a curious fact in pneumatics, which is said to be vouched for by many residents in the southwestern portion of the city. A steady southern breeze, according to this statement, prevails through the whole year round with sufficient force to keep in successful operation a windmill. The gentleman before named accounts for this fact in this way: The rapid current of the river above and below the falls carries with it a current of air, thus establishing a vacuum, which must be filled. The high and continuous knobs on the Indiana side prevent this vacuum being filled from that direction, and the almost perfect plateau back of the city supplies the necessity. Thus the current is established, and is said to vary in exact ratio with the rapidity of the current in the river. Whatever may be the accuracy of the fact, this gentleman asserts that this wind is as steady as the trade winds, and proposes to attest the correctness of his theory by erecting a mill somewhere in the vicinity of Twenty-sixth street and Broadway with such as its motive power.

The Manufacturers' Bank.

The exhibit of this new institution, published this morning, shows its very healthy and satisfactory condition. Although in operation but one year, and because of its new building, the payment of double rents, &c., it has incurred extraordinary expenses, yet it has declared a dividend of eight per cent., and has a surplus fund of $4,547 86. Such a favorable result is an evidence of careful, judicious and intelligent management which is bound to make it among the first of our financial institutions.

BASE BALL.

Terrible Discomfiture of the "Commercial" Nine—Score 48 to 24.

The "Commercial" nine, which is composed of excellent base-ball players, who had begun to believe themselves invincible, had the conceit handsomely taken out of them yesterday afternoon by the "COURIER-JOURNAL" nine in a game played at Cedar Hill. Their experience was pretty much like that of the small politicians who have had the temerity to butt up against the COURIER-JOURNAL of late years, and their fate should be a warning to all future generations.

As we said, the Commercial boys played well, but the terrific batting—we believe that is the proper term—of the COURIER-JOURNAL players was more than they had bargained for. They were all the time kept running over the field after the balls sent 'way beyond their out-fielders, and if the Commercial happens to be short of matter the next few days its readers will know how to excuse it. The legs of its printers were never made to stand such duties as were forced on them yesterday, and nature will demand a little time for recuperation. The following summary sufficiently tells the sad story—for the Commercial nine!—without need of further comment. We will only add that in the three last innings the COURIER-JOURNAL only had six representatives against nine of the Commercial players. The game was called on the seventh inning. The COURIER-JOURNALS, on their eighth inning, had made twelve runs and only one out, when the Umpire called the game on account of darkness, thus throwing the result back to the seventh inning:

Mat Shanahan.

Mat Shanahan, convicted of the murder of Conatee Montgomery and sentenced to be hung the 15th day of September next, has become convinced of, if not reconciled to, the certainty of his fate, and is spending the brief time allotted to him in preparation for his death. A priest has visited him several times since his conviction, and Shanahan occupies most of his day and part of the night in reading the Bible. He has been removed, at his own request, from the company of other prisoners and assigned a cell in the upper story of the jail. Here he lies on his cot reading his Bible, as above stated, during the day, and has been furnished candles for the same purpose at night. He may have confessed to the priest, but, as yet, has made no public statement of his guilt. There now seems no doubt that he will be hung at the time appointed.

A Blustering Honeymoon.

By what conjuration and what mighty magic the redoubtable Mollie Simmons compelled the son of a negress named Mary Parker to marry the said Mollie, last Saturday, report is unable to determine. The mother of the negro says that he was by some means induced to enter into the solemn engagement, and the negro says he did it not for love. Mollie's stratagem in taking the son from his mammy having proved successful, she thought she had acquired the right also to some clothing in the house of the bereft parent, and, accordingly, possessed herself of it. The parent considered this last act of Mollie's a felony, and swore out a warrant for her apprehension. Officers Rule and Conley, under the power conferred by this legal instrument, conveyed Mollie to First-street Station-house about one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

A Serious Hurt.

A boy about six years of age, son of Mr. F. R. Rink, owner of the saloon at No. 492 Jefferson street, met with a serious accident yesterday forenoon. He, with several other children, had been amusing himself in endeavoring to capture some June bugs at the flower-garden opposite his father's saloon. While climbing over a spiked fence, he was caught on the sharp points, and the lower part of his abdomen was frightfully lacerated. He was carried, bleeding most profusely, to his home. Dr. Kern was immediately summoned to him. After a careful examination of the wounds, the doctor was of opinion that no permanent injury had been sustained, and that the probability is that the wound will soon be healed. The remedies applied considerably alleviated the agony of the little sufferer.

The Pond Question.

In continuation of the article published in yesterday's issue relative to the sanitary effect of unhealthy ponds throughout the city, it may be stated that the filling up of these ponds does not devolve upon the city, but upon the property-holders. The city provides the means of drainage, and it is the duty of owners of property whereon are these ponds to see that they are not, then, dangerous to the health of the neighborhood. Upon complaint to the officers of the Board of Health, from citizens in the neighborhood, representing that these ponds are unhealthy, a warrant is issued to such property-holders to compel them to provide against the unhealthy nature of their property, by filling or otherwise. This should be borne in mind by those interested.

THE ROOMS of the Louisville Library Association, on the corner of Third and Walnut streets, have been thoroughly put in order, and now present an exceedingly pleasant and attractive appearance. LAST night about nine o'clock a gentleman left a horse and buggy in charge of a boy at the entrance to Woodland Garden. The gentleman acquainted the police of his loss, but at twelve o'clock last night the property was not recovered. The advertisement of a horse and buggy, which was taken up by a gentleman on Fourth street, appears elsewhere.

THE IVEY KILLING.

Arrest of Gabe Randolph and B. C. Myers, Charged with the Act.

Officers Slater, Kise, White, Butler and Johnson yesterday went out to Old Deposit station to arrest the parties engaged in the killing of Amos Ivey, who died of his wounds at the Infirmary on Saturday night. The particulars of the homicide have already been published in these columns, from which it appeared that one Gabe Randolph, a laborer in the employ of two young men named Myers, deliberately shot Ivey, from the effects which he died. Randolph had a sort of an examination before a neighboring magistrate in which Ivey did not testify, and the testimony of B. C. Myers, who was with Randolph at the time of the shooting, was admitted. On this testimony Randolph was dismissed, and until yesterday had gone at large. The officers found him at work in the field, and after arresting him brought him to this city and lodged him in jail. Randolph, after his arrest, remarked that had he been in the house at the time they would not have gotten him so easily. The shotgun with which he is said to have killed Ivey was found in the house. On their way out the officers passed young Myers, coming to town with a load of wood, and after lodging Randolph in jail Officer Slater arrested Myers at the house of his father, on Green street, between Hancock and Clay, and lodged him in jail with Randolph, on the charge of complicity in the killing. Mr. Slater also brought the woman into town, who was said to be the cause of the difficulty between the young men, and, at the examining trial of the accused, she will prove an important witness. The trial will take place this morning, unless postponed until the arrival of witnesses.

Cowardly Assault Upon an Old Man.

An old man named Mike Lynch was on his way to his home on the levee, between First and Second streets, a little after twelve this morning, and when on Third street, between Main and the river, met three young men, all said to be drunk. Without any provocation on the part of the old man, Tom White, one of the young party, pushed him with both hands off the pavement. Lynch fell, striking fairly upon the curbstone, inflicting an ugly wound upon the back of the head. He picked himself up with some difficulty, and was able to walk home. A policeman on Main street saw the transaction, and sounding the alarm started in pursuit of the three assaulters. White ran into a bar-room on the west side of the street and concealed himself in a back room. He was finally captured after a long search, and a little before one this morning was lodged in the First-street station-house. The other two made good their escape. Some women who saw the whole affair from an upper window corroborated the above statement after White's arrest.

The Primary Election in the First Ward To-day.

In consequence of the irregular proceedings at the meeting of the delegates from the First district to the July convention, and their failure to nominate a Democratic candidate for Representative, as it was claimed by the minority of the delegates selected for that purpose, the Democratic Executive Committee for the city have ordered a primary election in that district for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent the Democratic party in the next session of the General Assembly. It is important that the citizens of this district should poll a large vote on to-day, as it will evidence the interest they manifest in selecting the proper man to represent the interest of the district and the interest of the Democratic party.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Proceedings of the Meeting Last Night—Report of the Committee on Course of Study.

A very important meeting of the School Board was held last night. The Committee on Course of Study made a lengthy report recommending the various branches of study to be pursued and text-boks to be adopted throughout the various schools. Mr. Drysdale and Dr. Preston Scott offered their resignations, which were accepted, and the vacancies filled by the election of Mr. E. C. Bohne and Dr. John Goodman, respectively. The election for faculty of the Male High School resulted in the election of Messrs. R. L. Butler and S. B. Barton, Professor of Pure and Applied Mathematics. Prof. B. M. Harney was defeated by Mr. Barton by a vote of 13 to 7.

After a lengthy discussion as to the ineligibility of teachers under twenty years of age, the chair decided that any teachers under that age should be disqualified from serving as teachers. Dr. Preston Scott being confident that a number of teachers were elected last year under the required age, moved that the rules be suspended, to permit those elected to continue during the coming year, which was adopted. A motion then prevailed to re-elect all teachers under twenty years of age elected at last meeting.

The following is the report of the Committee on Course of Study.

To the Board of Trustees:

GENTLEMEN: The committee on examination and course of study has the honor to report as the result of the recent examination of teachers, that there were fifty-five applicants, of whom three received principal's certificates; five grammar certificates and twenty primary certificates, one being conditional for principal's certificate, five for grammar certificates and ten for primary certificates.

Your committee also recommend the adoption of the course of study, for the ward schools, as it now stands, with the following exceptions:

In revising for the course of study, for the ward and intermediate schools, your committee have considered very favorably the suggestions made in the report of last year. Then as now, there was great complaint of the number of books used, and the labor of the committee now results in carrying out and developing the plans and course of study adopted by the board last year. It will be observed that the changes recommended are comparatively few, consisting of two changes in books and the dropping of three other books. The changes are Butler's speller in place of Sanders' speller, and Holmes' history of the United States in place of McDonald's. Those dropped from the course of study are Towne's mental arithmetic, Bonnell's manual of composition and Butler's sixth reader. The reasons for these changes may be summed up in few words. Butler's speller is thought to be a better book than the one formerly in use. The history recommended, it is thought, is liable to very few objections; and, whilst your committee are not unanimous as to the study of history in the ward schools, they do not differ in their appreciation of the book recommended. As to the books dropped from use, there were in the course last year two mental arithmetics—Towne's mental and Stoddard's mental. The latter has been in the schools for some years, and is in the hands of many pupils; and it was thought better to make one text book answer for this branch of study. As to the readers, your committee have no fault to find, and have heard none suggested to Butler's sixth reader as a book. We are convinced, however, that five readers are ample for the course.

The changes recommended in the Female High School are unimportant, and the course of study of last year is not materially changed. The course of study and the text books for the Male High School have been fully considered, and the changes recommended are proposed, after full and free consultation with the professors as well as the members of the board who have taken a very lively interest in the Male High School. The result of such consultation is embraced in the schedule hereto appended, and also the books recommended for use. This programme embraces two courses, one a High School course proper, for all who enter the school with certificates of graduation at the end of three years, to those who pass successfully the examinations, and a collegiate course of two additional years, with diplomas after graduation to all such as are recommended by the faculty to the degrees of A. B. and B. S. By reference to the schedule, it will be perceived that the studies for the High School course are uniform with those of the collegiate course with one exception. Every scholar has the option on entering the High School to study Latin or German, and proficiency in one or the other up to certain standards will entitle the pupil to the certificate. It was deemed important to have a uniform standard of scholarship for all who receive certificates of graduation in the High School, and as it was thought best for those who take the collegiate course to have some knowledge of Latin preparatory to admission into the collegiate course of study, and as the German language is regarded as perhaps more useful to those who go no farther than the High School, this study is introduced to make the courses about equal. The High School course is but a legitimate continuation of the ward school course, so as to make the scholars as perfect and thorough as possible within the limited time they are in the schools. After passing well through the ward schools, with one, or two, or three years in the High School, boys can go to work with a fair share of scholarship, and with so much of the rudiments of an education as will enable them to go forward in their studies as time and opportunity may permit. Many reasons might be adduced to strengthen the positions here taken if it were necessary. We beg to state, in conclusion, that most of the changes in the books used, and the entire programme in the course of the High School, have been recommended only after repeated consultations with the faculty of the High School. We have an abiding faith in the practicability of this plan, and with an earnest corps of professors, a fair share of attention on the part of the Superintendent, the trustees individually and collectively, and the certain interest which the community will feel and exhibit in the management of the Male High School and the progress of the students, it must prove a success. And with this faith and confidence we commend the whole plan to the favorable consideration of the board.

CITY POLITICS.

The First Ward.

We call the attention of the Democratic voters in this ward to the primary election to be held to-day. There are several candidates in the field, all of whom are very good men and identified with the interest of their constituents and the prosperity of the city and State. While we do not wish to speak in favor of either very particularly, we are bound by our own knowledge of facts to give praise to M. W. Ferguson as having made, during the last two sessions, a valuable, useful and effective member, and he would again serve his people, if chosen as nominee.

MANY VOTERS.

Primary Election in the First Ward.

By order of the Democratic Executive Committee, the voters of the First ward will hold a primary election in the different precincts of the First ward for a candidate as Representative for the next Legislature, on Tuesday, July 18th, between the hours of 9 and 8 P. M. on said day. The candidate receiving the highest number of votes shall be considered the nominee.

The following gentlemen are respectfully requested to act as officers of said election, with full authority to accept or reject votes:

First Precinct—Judges, J. S. Turner and J. Gosnell; Clerk, J. R. Chambers; Sheriff, Miles Bess.

Second Precinct—Judges, Fred. Tix and Fred. Rehm; Clerk, Wm. Wahl; Sheriff, George Roth.

Third Precinct—Judges, George Michael and Owen McCraw; Clerk, Charles Henneginе; Sheriff, John Faust.

GEO. P. DOERN,
Chairman Democratic Exec. Committee.

MR. NEEDHAM REJOINS.

He Takes a Side Glance at the Courier-Journal and Goes for Mr. Beck.

LIVELY OLD STATISTICS.

[To the Editor of the Courier-Journal.]

In your paper of the 14th is an editorial article headed "Mr. Needham on the Tariff." In that article you were kind enough to say that that portion of my Bowling Green speech which refers to the existing tariff is "nonsense, and a miserable example of special pleading;" and that in this speech "I was guilty of the disreditable trick of trying to humbug a rural audience." You also blame me quite seriously for introducing some very valuable statements and tables taken from the tariff reports made to Congress from time to time by Special Commissioner Wells. In addition to this, I am condescendingly informed that Secretary Boutwell has been pronounced "a veritable charlatan in finance;" that "President Grant knows nothing of political economy;" and that "my tariff notions generally are a wretched piece of clap-trap," and an attempt to make "the worse appear the better reason;" and then once more you repeat, and "pitch into" me for presuming to mislead so inexperienced a "rural audience" as generally congregates on such occasions in the city of Bowling Green, one of the largest cities, as you well know, in Southern Kentucky. Concerning all of which, with your permission, gentlemen,

I RISE TO EXPLAIN.

And, first, if I have gotten into any unpleasantness by my speech at Bowling Green, you led me there—for it was your paper that gave the fullest reports of Mr. Beck's "rural-audience" speeches, commencing at Elizabethtown and ending at Owensboro—and it was the COURIER-JOURNAL that persuaded me that Mr. Beck was a great man, a successful politician and an enlightened statesman, and that his political prelections on the tariff and national questions generally were so valuable that you considered them worthy to be gathered up and published as a sound "Democratic political text book," and, as such, to be held in reverence by all good Republicans.

I believed the COURIER-JOURNAL. I therefore read Mr. Beck's speeches. I didn't believe the speeches, and, therefore, I went before a Bowling Green "rural audience" to give the reasons of my dissent. On that occasion I said nothing about "Secretary Boutwell, or his financial schemes," and nothing about "General Grant's knowledges of political economy." I did not advocate a protective tariff, nor did I denounce the doctrines of free trade; on the contrary I am in full accord with "revenue reform," as I understand it, and as generally explained by Mr. Wells in his reports to Congress. I made the address at Bowling Green for the sole purpose of exposing the sophistries and misstatements of the Hon. J. B. Beck, as these are embodied in his "political text-book." Whether I succeeded or not, I leave for the public (including the "rural audiences") to decide, and, with your leave, gentlemen of the COURIER-JOURNAL, we will stick to brother Beck in this discussion. I go for Beck, and not for any side issues.

When Mr. Beck made his speech before the rural audience of Bowling Green he attempted to back up his bitter and malignant denunciation of the Republican party by introducing the testimony of a very credible witness.

Instinctively borrowing a term from the vocabulary of the rebellion, which in turn the rebels borrowed from the abusive and contemptible nomenclature of English toryism, Mr. Beck calls his witness, Hon. David A. Wells, a Radical; but, Radical or not, he indorses him as a good witness. Mr. Beck, then, and not Mr. Needham, was the person guilty of the crime of "humbugging the rural audience of Bowling Green," by introducing the very able and instructive reports of Hon. D. A. Wells, which the COURIER-JOURNAL supposes this rural audience never read or heard of before.

Mr. Beck having cleared the way for the introduction of Mr. Wells' testimony as to the general effect of the tariff of 1866—9 upon the manufacturing and agricultural industry of the country, I did nothing but to let Mr. Wells speak for himself, or, in other words, tell his own story. And I put it to the COURIER-JOURNAL, and to Mr. Beck himself, whether I didn't get in some right good testimony. Don't it read capitally for our side?

Mr. Wells seems to be such a favorite with Mr. Beck and the COURIER-JOURNAL, and to talk so sensibly concerning the tariff and revenue matters generally, that I think one can do no better than to let him talk a little more with the readers of your paper, and with the public generally.

In Mr. Wells' splendid report, on the tariff, for the year 1869, after a careful summing up of the cost, the wastage and the destructiveness of the war for the suppression of the rebellion, both in the North and in the South, and which he estimates at the enormous sum of $9,000,000,000, he states his views in the following ringing and eloquent sentences, which I can heartily recommend, not only to the "rural audiences" of the country, but to all good patriots in this city who honestly "accept the situation."

"This, then, says Mr. Wells, was the cost of the destruction of slavery; the cost of compromise; the cost of the unfaithfulness of those who founded this nation, to the idea by which the nation lives. What does it measure? It is substantially a thousand millions a year for nine years; or, at the wages of five hundred dollars a year, the labor of two millions of men exerted continuously during the whole of that period. It is three times as much as the slave property of the country was ever worth. It is a sum which, at interest, would yield, to the end of time, twice as much as the annual slave products of the South in its best estate. The places of those who sleep in their graves have been filled by new laborers; the incubus of slavery, which was slowly but surely making the fertile South a desert scorched as by a consuming fire, has been removed; thousands of miles of new railroads; inventions never before excelled in their labor-saving character; millions of acres of the richest lands opened to settlement, now render labor easy and product large. Without faltering, and without tampering with the public faith, it is now the duty of this people to undertake the far easier task of payment for the service already rendered. If we hesitate or falter, dishonor second only to that which tolerated slavery will overwhelm the land, and the idea of a free people governing themselves will become a scorn and a byword among nations."

Gentlemen, I call that good, healthy Democratic reading—don't you?

But again, gentlemen, you must be aware that there are two sides to this tariff question. As honest men, and as the conductors of the ablest and most influential Democratic newspaper in the Southwest, you have always shown a willingness to let both sides be heard. You did this when the Republicans of Louisville had no daily organ of their own, and we are not unmindful of your liberality. Will you therefore permit Mr. Wells to state in his own clear and conclusive manner.

In his report for 1868, Mr. Wells thus states the argument:

"There is furthermore another view of this question, which cannot be overlooked in this country—its social aspect. Free trade looks only to the increase of wealth. It takes no account of social results; it does not even regard the distribution of property. Even English economists admit that its axioms lead to sameness of occupation, and sameness of occupation means a tardy development of society.

"But in this country every man is a citizen, and nearly every citizen a voter. As the possessors of power we cannot afford to have any class of the people ignorant or socially degraded. To insure a safe standard of education and of domestic comfort, there must be a certain scale of wages, and these must be relatively higher than are paid to the competing laborer of Europe, to whom power is not intrusted, and education is denied. These degraded laborers constitute the dangerous classes, but no dangerous classes ought to be suffered to exist in America.

"Whatever discrimination, therefore, may be necessary to keep up the social status and the self-respect of the American voter, is a tax imposed by our political system, and it is a tax which the enjoyment of that system amply repays."

But again, Mr. Wells, true to himself, backs up the general statement just quoted by showing that, practically, there is nowhere among commercial nations a perfect system of free trade, and that there is a clear practical at the present time. He says:

"Again, a careful study of the financial systems of the various commercial nations of Europe led the commission unhesitatingly to the conclusion—that, whatever may be the state of European public opinion in respect to free trade, and whatever may be the claims preferred for it on the broad grounds of liberality and humanitarianism, the fiscal legislation of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Austria, and Russia is now, and always has been, framed solely and exclusively with reference to one object, viz: the promotion of supposed national self-interest, and has never had the slightest regard to the interest of any other nation, or to any arguments other than those based upon specific national wants and specific national experiences.

"If we turn next to France, we shall find that protection, besides being recognized as a principle in the determination of taxes and imports, manifests itself even more conspicuously in other forms; as, for example, in the regulation by Government of railroad freights on coal and iron, and in the obstacles which are officially placed in the way of operatives changing their employers.

"In the new tariff of the Zollverein (June, 1868), although its rearrangement on a very low percentage of duties is claimed as a triumph of free trade, it is to be noted that especial care has been taken to largely and progressively increase the rates on the importation of all articles the domestic manufacture of which it is considered by Prussia as desirable to promote and foster."

So much for Mr. Wells' statement of the other side of the question. You certainly will agree with me that it is stated clearly and forcibly.

But again, sir, you and I can afford to be perfectly

CANDID WITH EACH OTHER.

I have no doubt that you are correct when you say "that whatever changes for the better have been made in our tariff laws are in a great measure due to Mr. Wells' labors;" but your patriotic protege, Mr. Beck, denies that any changes for the better have been made in the tariff laws by the Republican party. He says "these changes generally, if not always, reduce the amount paid into the treasury and increase the amount paid into the pockets of the protected monopolists," and yet it is notorious that these changes for the most part are precisely the changes which Mr. Wells recommended.

I have before me a list of twenty-eight important articles used in the manufacturing industry of the country, which were taxed under the old tariff from ten to thirty per cent., but which Mr. W. recommended to be placed on the free list. A Republican Congress, in the passage of the act of July 14, 1870, did place twenty-five of these articles upon the free list, and in all of them there is free trade to-day.

Let me say to you, gentlemen, that the wide and comprehensive collation of facts and the conservative, practical recommendations of Mr. Wells in relation to the tariff as far as removed from the partisan twaddle of Mr. Beck as is light from darkness. The one is a practical statesman, and the other is—well, he is the author of a Kentucky "Democratic text-book."

IN THE TARIFF ADDRESS

which Mr. Wells made to the citizens of Louisville, a few months since, he thus summarily states his views as to the proper method of tariff reforms, as reported in the columns of the COURIER-JOURNAL. He says: "But on this work of reform I would be both progressive and conservative. I recognize fully that the Government, by a maintenance during the last ten years of a high protective policy, has afforded a bounty and an encouragement for certain special investments of capital, and any pledge that might thus have been indirectly given I would withdraw gradually and with sufficient notice to allow of preparation. Besides which, I consider that the work of currency reform should go hand-in-hand and be made co-ordinate with tariff reform. And with these reforms accomplished, the industry of the country in every department would become practicable independent of legislation, and be placed substantially upon the basis of prosperity which it enjoyed in 1859-60."

It is possible that Mr. Wells has become more extreme in his views, now that he is no longer in the employment of the General Government, the term of the office created specially for him having expired, but doubtless he holds now, as he held in 1868 and 1869, to wit:

That the policy of moderate and judicious protection under the tariff is, certainly for the present, the policy best suited to subserve the industrial interests of the whole country, and that there are none worthy to bear the name of an American citizen who desire that the industry of foreign countries should prosper and be extended at the expense of our own.

Your articles on the "Decadence of American Shipping" and the "Tariff on Marble" will receive attention in due time. E. N.

HARRODSBURG.

Gov. Leslie's Speech—Izard Explains.

[To the Editor of the Courier-Journal.]

HARRODSBURG, KY., July 16, 1871.

In yesterday's issue of the Louisville Commercial, there appeared two editorials in reference to what your correspondent stated about Gov. Leslie's speech made in Harrodsburg a few days since. The Commercial attempts to prove, from that letter to the COURIER-JOURNAL, that Gov. Leslie said that he knew the people of his county were opposed to the Cincinnati Southern railroad because they refused to return Gen. Lewis to the Legislature on account of his having voted for the passage of said bill.

If the letter to the COURIER-JOURNAL did say this, it was simply a mistake, and did not give Governor Leslie's words correctly. It was written hurriedly, and intended to let the Democratic voters of Kentucky, and the Commercial particularly, know that Governor Leslie was in favor of granting a charter for the road, and would sign a bill to that effect if one were passed by the next Legislature, and he should then be Governor.

What Governor Leslie did say, was in substance as follows: That after General Lewis resigned, the question of the Cincinnati Southern railroad was made an issue in the selection of a candidate to fill Gen. Lewis' place in the Legislature; and the people of his county were largely in favor of a man that was opposed to the railroad; and that he knew, from this fact, the sentiment of his constituents, and so voted against the bill. He furthermore stated that he had examined the bill thoroughly and could find no constitutional objection to it, and was personally in favor of it, as he so stated in a private conversation to Judge M. J. Durham and perhaps others, whilst the last Legislature was in session. I hope the Commercial will make the proper correction, and not cast any reflections on Gov. Leslie on account of an accidental misstatement contained in a letter, the main object of which was to give Gov. Leslie's present position on the Southern railroad question. IZARD.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

MONDAY, July 17, 1871.—Stephen E. Jones, assignee of M. S. Dahoney, vs. John W. Kirby et al. This case came up before the court, on demurrer, to defendants' response to rule, requiring them to pay into court certain funds in their hands. It appears from the pleadings and exhibits in the case, that several creditors of the bankrupt herein had commenced suits by attachments in the Gallatin Circuit Court (Kentucky) within four months preceding the filing of the petition and schedules of the bankrupt, the attached property being sold by defendant, Kirby, as sheriff of Gallatin county, realizing about $2,500. That Jones, the assignee of the bankrupt, became a party to said attachment suits in the State court, and on his motion the attachments were dissolved pursuant to the provisions of the 14th section of the bankrupt act; and the proceeds of the sale of the attached property ordered by the court to be paid over to the assignee in bankruptcy, except sufficient amount of the same to cover the costs in said attachment suits and reasonable attorney's fees, which last amount the sheriff was directed to pay to the proper parties. The sheriff paid the assignee the sum of $1,806, and declined to make any further payment, except the sum of $876, which he deposited with the clerk, with his response herein, by which he claimed that the attorneys' fees and costs above mentioned absorbed the balance, except the sum of $55, which he held subject to the order of the Bankrupt Court. The plaintiff Jones was represented by Ossian Ward, Esq., and the respondents by Gen. H. Marshall. The plaintiff insisted that the rule should be made absolute, for the following reasons: First, The State courts having dissolved the attachments, and decided that the attached property vested in the assignee in bankruptcy by virtue of his assignment from the Bankruptcy Court, it had absolutely no jurisdiction to distribute any part of the funds. Second, That if the attaching creditors acquired any right to have their costs and attorneys' fees paid out of the funds, that right could only be asserted in the Bankrupt Court. The evidence and argument of counsel being heard, the court held: That the assignee, Jones, having been a party to the suits in the State court, he is bound by the decree therein, and, whether the decree is right or wrong, this court has no authority or jurisdiction to set it aside or disturb it. If the assignee feels aggrieved by the action of the State court, he has his remedy by appeal to the Court of Appeals of the State.

Rule discharged as to Wenslow, and made absolute as to Kirby for $55; each party to pay their own costs.

In re Lewis Lane, Bath county, Ky.; specifications of creditors opposing discharge of the bankrupt overruled, and discharge granted.

In re F. L. Simms; on report of S. E. Jones, assignee, herein it being shown that the creditors had been paid too great a dividend. It is ordered that the general creditors refund 8 13-14 per cent. of amount of debts proved by them, or 21 33-40 per cent. of dividends paid to them.

In re Thomas C. Calvert; on rule against Mary Kennard; cause heard and submitted.

☞Hampton Court Chapel, London, was once the scene of a singular epidemic. One Sunday a youthful beauty fainted, and the handsome Sir Horace Seymour carried her out. The next Sunday another young lady was similarly attacked, and Sir Horace with like gallantry sprang to her relief. And thus the epidemic went on. On successive Sundays successive beauties fainted, and the handsome Horace carried them successively out, till he grew tired of bearing such sweet burdens. An announcement was made that in future all swooning nymphs would be carried out of the chapel by the dustman, whereupon the malady rapidly disappeared.
